FRENCH PREMIER MAY SEEK TO POSTPONE NAVAL CONFERENCE

M. Tardieu Forms Cabinet By Two-Vote Margin

PARIS, Nov. 9.—The new government of Premier Andre Tardieu may ask for a postponement of the five-power naval conference scheduled to begin in London on January 20, International News Service learned exclusively today from an authoritative, official source.

The new cabinet, it was revealed, fears that it will not have sufficient time to prepare sufficiently for a conference of such importance before the middle of January.

The interchanges of the subject of armaments between the various governments, it was pointed out, have indicated the vast preparations necessary for participation in such a conference.

These preliminaries, it was stated, would be doubly lengthy from the French standpoint because of difficulties the government would be certain to encounter in attempting to dovetail the ideals established by the United States and Great Britain with France's pledges to the league nations.

There is also a domestic political friction to be reckoned with. A definite attitude on the subject of armaments taken by the new government might endanger its majority it received in the votes of confidence taken this morning.

This probably explains why neither M. Tardieu nor M. Briand mentioned the disarmament problem in their brilliant speeches in the chamber of deputies before the vote of confidence was taken.

Thrown into the breach to form a cabinet after two other leaders had failed, Tardieu accomplished a feat of political engineering which had been considered well-nigh impossible.

Out of political chaos he brought order. Attacked by both the left and right wings when he announced his cabinet, he emerged from two confidence votes in the chamber of deputies this morning with majorities of 71 and 79, respectively.

Even his strongest supporters had expected victory by only a small margin. But M. Tardieu's government today was on a staple enough basis to insure the carrying out of all of his policies, as the confidence votes attested.

Standing in the limelight with M. Tardieu, although not so far in the foreground, was M. Briand, foreign minister in the new cabinet and shaggy veteran of hundreds of political battles.

It was Briand who turned the tide in M. Tardieu's direction by brilliant oratory in the chamber, but it was M. Tardieu himself who made the result certain by a simple, straight-forward statement of irrefutable facts in which he explained to the deputies satisfaction just how he planned to pilot the ship of state.

BERLIN, Nov. 9.—Genuine consternation was expressed in political circles today over the recent declarations of M. Andre Tardieu, new French premier, with regard to the Hague reparations agreements.

Coming on top of the delay in French evacuation of the Rhine-land, feelings have been aroused here that international agreements are being pushed aside in the stress of politics in France.

Authoritative foreign office circles declare that Germany takes the stand that the Hague agreements specifically provide that if the Young plan is ratified before June 30, 1930, evacuation of the Rhine-land must be completed by that date also.

The press sharply criticizes the French foreign policy, and one newspaper remarks that M. Tardieu "apparently is still unfamiliar with the Hague agreements."

TREASURY REFUSES DATA ON DIPLOMATIC LIQUOR IMPORTS

Information Would Violate Precedent Officials Say

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Disclosure of the volume of liquor imports for foreign embassies and legations would violate the diplomatic precedent and would be contrary to international courtesy, treasury officials said today, in commenting on the demand of Senator Howell (R) of Nebraska, for this information.

Howell asked for data on imports of diplomatic liquor in a letter to the treasury department, and in a personal conference at the state department. The treasury replied that the desired information was considered confidential and could not be furnished. It was understood Howell received about the same reply as the state department.

Officials declared there has been virtually no illegal use of diplomatic liquor in Washington and that diplomats have not abused this privilege, recognized under international practice.

The contention that transporters of embassy liquor from ports of entry to Washington, or other diplomatic stations, are guilty of violation of the national dry law was disputed at the treasury.

Some time ago regulations were issued to the effect that each consignment of diplomatic liquor must be accompanied by an accredited agent of the embassy or legation to which it was being taken.

It was pointed out that in this way the diplomat or his agent is technically in possession of the liquor and that under chapter 6, section 251 and 252 of the code of laws of the United States he cannot be molested. These read:

Section 251. Violation of safe conduct; penalty. Every person who violates any safe conduct or passport duly obtained and issued under authority of the United States shall be imprisoned for not more than three years and fined at the discretion of the court.

Section 252. Suits against ministers and their domestics prohibited. Whenever any writ or process issued out or prosecuted by any person in any court of the United States, or of a state, or by any judge or justice, whereby the person or any ambassador or public minister or any foreign prince or state, authorized and received as such by the president, or any domestic or domestic servant of any such minister, is arrested or imprisoned, or his goods or chattels are distrained, seized or attached, such writ or process shall be deemed void.

Permits for importation or diplomatic liquor are obtained at the state department, which forwards them, on approval, to the treasury. The customs collectors then are notified to permit the importation. So far as practicable the treasury has instructed that diplomatic liquor be brought into this country through the port of Baltimore.

The body lies in the Philadelphia County morgue and an examination will be made today to discover whether it checks with the description of the missing physician.

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of the Cleveland man has led police to fear he met with foul play. This theory was given further credence today upon receipt of word from his wife that the missing man may have been carrying $5,000 in cash. Authorities thus far have been unable to find a single clue that would either establish his death or his safety.

CONGRESS MAY PROBE FINANCING OF TALL BRIDGES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—A congressional investigation into the methods of financing the construction and maintenance of toll bridges will be sought during the regular session of congress, Senator Odie (R) of Nevada, today told the legislative committee of the American Motorists' Association.

"The American Motorists' Association has for years been waging a fight for the abolition of all toll bridges in the United States," said Thomas J. Keefe, general manager.

"Such an investigation as Senator Odie proposes should receive the support of every motorist in the country. The toll bridge is just as reprehensible as the toll rate system."

At the christening nearly twenty years ago, Conroy, according to the girl's relatives, cradled the infant carefully in his arms and joked about waiting until the girl grew up when he would marry her.

HOLD WOMAN IN KIDNAPING CASE

LONDON, Nov. 9.—Charged with deceiving Aaron Brenner, New York fur merchant, into the hands of kidnappers who are holding him for half a million dollars ransom, a beautiful Russian woman has been arrested at the evening news dispatches to the London newspapers declared today.

The kidnapped man's brother, the dispatches continued, has offered $50,000 for his release.

REMAINS PRISONER

MADRID, Nov. 9.—Former Premier Sanchez Guerra, once one of the most distinguished figures in Spanish politics, will remain a prisoner for an indefinite period despite his acquittal on treason charges by a court martial at Valencia. The army and navy supreme court martial must render a supplementary decision before Guerra can be released.

Mysterious "Ione Orde" Leaves Jail on Arm of Her Mother

Ione Orde, former New York society girl, Paris art student and night club hostess, who proved to be Gloria Rouze, is released from Plaquemines Parish Jail, Point a La Hache, La., following the arrival of her mother, where she has been held as a material witness in the mysterious death of Jack Kraft while traveling on the "S. S. Creole."

OHIO OFFICIAL STILL MISSING; CLEWS LACKING

Phone Calls Give Impetus To Search For Chemist

POTTSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 9.—New impetus was given the investigation today into the mystery surrounding the strange disappearance of Dr. Ernest Watzel, Cleveland chemist, and the discovery of his charred auto on a lonely road near here, with the receipt of two telephone calls during the night by Chief of Police Jesse Neiman, of Pottstown, suggesting that the body of an unidentified man found along the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks near Conshohocken last Tuesday may be that of the missing Ohio official.

The body lies in the Philadelphia County morgue and an examination will be made today to discover whether it checks with the description of the missing physician.

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of the Cleveland man has led police to fear he met with foul play. This theory was given further credence today upon receipt of word from his wife that the missing man may have been carrying $5,000 in cash. Authorities thus far have been unable to find a single clue that would either establish his death or his safety.

FATHER, MOTHER, 3 CHILDREN ARE DYING OF BURNS

DETROIT, Nov. 9.—A father and mother and the three children they rescued from their burning home were believed dying of burns today in Highland Park General Hospital.

Walter Waibel, 37, and his wife, Helen, 25, were severely burned when Waibel, preparing breakfast, poured kerosene into a kitchen stove in their one-story home. An explosion swept flames into the bedroom where Richard, 6; Eugene, 4; and Wanda, 2, were sleeping. The already badly burned parents rushed into the blazing bedroom and rescued the children.

The first Mrs. Ash charged that her husband was cruel to her and named a 16-year-old adopted daughter as co-responder, making several sensational charges of alleged improper actions between the minister and the adopted daughter.

The divorce was granted on the grounds of cruelty.

From the time of his trial, he had wooed Mrs. Stubbins, it is reported. The minister now is a stepfather to a boy of thirteen and a girl of nine, children of Mrs. Stubbins by the woman's first marriage.

'DEAR OLD QUAKER'

LONDON, Nov. 9.—President Hoover, in the opinion of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, is a "dear old Quaker." The British premier in a Labor address here, revealed he was sorely tempted to call Mr. Hoover by this name during their peace talks at the President's Virginia camp.

CONGRESS PLANNED

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—The All-Ohio Safety Congress will be held in Columbus January 11, 15 and 16. Thomas P. Kearns, superintendent of the Division of Safety and Hygiene, announced Monday. This will be the third annual meeting for fruits for growers who have fruit of good quality.

TODAY'S CHUCKLE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Political Washington's best laugh is still ringing today.

It has to do with jackasses, horses, mules and things.

While Senator George H. Moses (R) N. H. was describing western insurgent and Democratic senators as "jackasses," the serious minded interstate commerce commission, which deals with railroad rates on various commodities, issued a report recommending modification in the railroad rates on "horses, mules, burros and asses in carload lots, to, from and between points in southwestern and western trunkline territory."

The states covered by the recommendations include Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, New Mexico, Iowa, Louisiana, South Dakota and Colorado.

ROMANCE COMES AGAIN TO PASTOR; WEDS FORMER NURSE

URICHVILLE, O., Nov. 9.—A romance which bloomed forth from the dying ashes of a minister's matrimonial career which crashed on the rocks when his wife accused him of allowing the fire of his love for her to cool, flaming instead for a roister laughter, is responsible today for the marriage of Rev. Floyd L. Ash, former pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church here, and Mrs. Ina M. Stubbins, of Urichville.

Rev. Ash, who is now pastor of the churches at Maynard, Pleasant Grove and Dillonvale in eastern Ohio, announced that he had wed Mrs. Stubbins, but would not tell when or where, though he stated the ceremony was performed in West Virginia.

Mrs. Stubbins is the widow of a man at whose funeral services Rev. Ash, now her husband, participated.

When the first Mrs. Ash filed the sensational divorce charges against her husband, he suffered a nervous breakdown and at one period during the divorce trial, he was carried into court seated in a rocking chair.

Mrs. Stubbins, a nurse, was called in to attend the minister.

SUSPEND BUSINESS

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Business is suspended on the security exchange today to permit uninterrupted work on delayed bookkeeping. Banks and the commodity exchange are open as usual. Dealings in stocks will be resumed on Monday, but a daily schedule of three hours will be observed throughout next week except on Saturday, when trading will be suspended entirely.

PRINCE ENTERTAINS British Ex-Soldiers, Wearers Of Hero Cross, To Dine With Wales

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The Prince of Wales tonight is giving a dinner in the House of Lords to 321 ex-soldiers from all over the British empire who by their individual heroism won the Victoria cross, the highest honor in the British army, during the World War.

Some of those attending have no arms. Others lost their legs in the war. Two are totally blind. Places at the table were drawn by lot. Viscount Gort was to sit on the left of the prince. Former Sergeant Burman, a chauffeur, was to flank his royal highness on the right.

This dinner was the Prince's own idea and was suggested by him to the British Legion several months ago as the best way in which he might "do his share" on the eleventh anniversary of the Armistice towards remembering the men who risked their lives to save the future throne.

Realizing that these men came from every rank in life and that many might be ill at ease in the presence of the heir to the throne, the prince stipulated that the dinner was to be entirely informal and that all should come in lounge suits. So tonight these men, who by their bravery under fire won a little bronze medal inscribed "for valour," will gather in a banquet hall usually frequented by the peers of England.

That the war heroes have been quickly forgotten with the passing of time was clearly brought out during the efforts to bring these men together.

Nearly 100 of them did not reply to the invitations and when sought out shyly revealed they were destitute, without either an extra suit of clothes or money enough to take them to London.

A number of them were without work, others only had part time jobs and still others were just able to make both ends meet with the small wages they were earning.

When the British Legion heard of this, it appealed to the nation through the press, and then for a brief time Britain remembered her heroes and voluntary contributions flowed in.

Tailors offered to clothe the men, the railway companies, buses street cars and subways offered them free transportation, and clubs threw open their doors to them.

Contributions ranged from one dollar to $500 until the fund reached nearly $4,000. This sum enabled the British Legion to make all necessary arrangements for the men.

And so today, Britain's war heroes were enjoying virtually the freedom of London as they waited for the hour when they would sit down to dine with the Prince, whose thoughtfulness made it possible for them to meet each other and share together the feeling of only momentarily, that they had not been forgotten.

In addition to the Prince of Wales, Earl Jellicoe, president of the British Legion, and members of the national executive council of the Legion will be present. The dinner is otherwise restricted to V. C.'s.

The first figure of the Hoover regime and the last of the Coolidge administration are thus a little hard to compare, as while simple subtraction would indicate a reduction of $110,000,000 for next year, no account can be taken of the deficiencies that will be run up. It is probable, however, they will ultimately be found to be approximately on the same level.

After two other leaders had failed, Premier Andre Tardieu was successful in forming a French cabinet, accomplishing a feat that had been considered by political leaders as almost impossible. His victory by a margin of two votes was unexpected even to his strongest supporters.

A joint conference between officers of the Master Cleaners and Dyers' Association and members of the Cleaners, Dyers and Pressers Union was continued today.

GRAPE CROP POOR; PRICES NOT HIGH

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—Because the Ohio grape crop this year is only slightly more than one-half what it was a year ago, Ohio grape growers have wondered why the price is not better. The explanation lies in the fact that the national crop, not the Ohio crop, determines the price. Ohio grows only about one per cent of the grapes produced in the United States, and the crop in the larger producing states sets the season's price, points out C. R. Arnold of the Ohio State University here.

This year's grape crop in the United States as a whole is not up to the average, by about 12 per cent, and is about 25 per cent below last year's figure, which was unusually large, says Arnold. The prospects are for the production of about two million tons of grapes in the United States this year.

California, the most important grape-producing state in the country, grows about 80 per cent of the grapes in the United States. California's crop this year will be about 14 per cent below the average, according to present records. New York, the second state in grape production, will harvest more than a normal crop this season, and Michigan's grape crop also will run 40 per cent above the average.

This has not been a profitable year for fruit growers generally. Arnold reports. The fruit crops have been generally small, the quality is usually low, and there has been unusual expense in fighting diseases and insects. Higher prices for fruits will benefit only the comparatively few growers who have fruit of good quality.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—An invention which is hoped to reduce the labor of the army of business stenographers will receive a public demonstration next Tuesday.

"Lady Edison," (Beulah Louise Henry) is the scientific mother of the device. It consists of an attachable ribbon for any typewriter which, it is claimed, will eliminate the necessity of using carbon paper.

"Lady Edison," descendant of Patrick Henry, and granddaughter of former Governor Holden, of North Carolina, has forty-three successful inventions to her credit.

"I know nothing of mechanics," she said today. "I believe I have a strong psychic power. The idea for an invention strikes me suddenly and then it is as good as completed. I direct the construction through expert mechanics."

Among the many articles which "Lady Edison" has produced are numerous ingeniously-constructed dolls and toys.

"I believe that the spirit of some little dead child communicates with me and suggests the ideas to me for these toys," Miss Henry said. The inventress is an individual type of spiritualist. She has never attended a seance.

ELYRIA PLANT IS WRECKED; LIGHTED CIGARETTE BLAMED

Warning Of Fellow Workman Comes Too Late

ELYRIA, O., Nov. 9.—Five workmen were killed and four seriously injured when a terrific gas explosion wrecked the plant of the Timm Spring Co., here this morning.

The blast occurred shortly after seven a. m., as the workmen were entering the plant.

Only one of the dead men is identified so far. He is John Raple, 21, a workman.

All of the bodies of the dead men were horribly mangled, making immediate identification difficult.

The blast is believed to have resulted when one of the workmen lighted a cigarette.

Sam Husted, one of the workmen in the plant who was injured in the blast, told authorities he smelled gas as soon as he entered the building this morning. He said he saw a fellow-workman pull out a match to light a cigarette.

"Don't light that match," Husted said he yelled to the man. "We'll all be blown to hell."

The warning came too late, however.

The next instant the terrific blast split, shattering the entire structure. A few minutes later flames leaped out of the wreckage and spread rapidly.

The shock of the explosion was felt all over the city. Scores of windows crumbled. Several homes nearby the Timm plant caught on fire.

All available men of the police and fire departments were rushed to the scene of the explosion. Scores of volunteers aided in getting the situation under hand.

The Timm plant employs fifty men. Because of the early hour many had not arrived at the building. Had the blast occurred a few minutes later the loss of life would undoubtedly have been greater.

Authorities were holding Frank Amato, 17, who entered the shop about the time the shot was fired. Although he is being questioned no charge has been lodged against him.

A joint conference between officers of the Master Cleaners and Dyers' Association and members of the Cleaners, Dyers and Pressers Union was continued today.

WOULD LIFT EXILE PROBATION GRANTED MRS. PANTAGES

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 9.—Mrs. Alexander Pantages, wife of the wealthy showman, today had been granted probation, following her conviction of manslaughter. She was held responsible for the death of Jura Rokumoto, a Japanese gardener killed in an automobile crash.

The period of probation was set as ten years. During this time she must not take a drink of intoxicating liquor, must obey all laws and not drive an automobile. In addition she must pay $75,000 to the estate of the dead gardener.

DEBIL, Nov. 9.—Investigation was being made today into the bombing of the British ex-servicemen's hall at Inchicore, near here. The place was demolished by a land mine. Numerous arrests are expected.

MARKET CRASH COSTS OMAHA PIANIST $900,000

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—"I lost every cent I had in the Wall Street market crash," said Miss Margaret Shotwell of Omaha, concert pianist, now in New York, made this assertion today in her suite at the Savoy-Plaza. Not only is her fortune of $900,000 wiped out but, she said, she is indebted to her brokers to the extent of $50,000.

"I must get down to hard work now," said the 22-year-old pianist who became famous when she inherited $1,000,000.

"I'm going to give up my suite here and go to Omaha in a few days to settle my affairs. I shall return to New York and take a small apartment. I shall keep up my piano works."

And then—philosophically—the young woman added: "Well, I was just one of the suckers. There were many others."

Miss Shotwell said she was in Omaha visiting her mother, Mrs. Margaret Shotwell, when the stock market began to drop. She possessed stock in a tobacco company. This she sent to New York to protect her margin. Prices continued downward in Wall Street. She lost the stock and then, according to her story, her broker "carried" her for $50,000 more.

Now she's "trying to find a broker who'll buy her chinchilla coat."

Miss Shotwell is the daughter of the late Judge Franklin Shotwell of the Nebraska Supreme Court. At 19 she had the distinction of being the only girl pianist to play in the Paris National Opera House. She was also the only girl to appear on the concert stage with the London Symphony.

She achieved publicity some time ago when reports came from Europe that a duel was fought over her by a friend of Count Salim.

SKELETON MYSTERY

A warrant has been issued at Camden, N. J., for the arrest of Mrs. Gladys Baker 35, also known as Gladys Baker, Broadway night club dancer, more recently a model at a Philadelphia store, on a charge of suspicion of killing a child whose bleached bones were found in heavy underbrush at National Park, N. J. The child is believed to have been Dorothy Rogers, 6, shown below, daughter of Allen Rogers, Woodbury, N. J., insurance agent, who told police he entrusted Dorothy and a young son to Mrs. Baker following the death of his wife last year. He now is fearful regarding his other child, Timothy, 2. The proprietor of the rooming house where the children were kept says they were mistreated.

GODFATHER SUED FOR HEART BALM

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Miss Eileen Bowen, 20, was christened in the arms of Michael Conroy nearly two decades ago; today she is suing her godfather, now forty-five years old, for $200,000 in a breach of promise suit.

According to the suit, Conroy left his fiancée waiting at the church altar this fall and sent a note of apology saying that he had to help his sister clean house.

At the christening nearly twenty years ago, Conroy, according to the girl's relatives, cradled the infant carefully in his arms and joked about waiting until the girl grew up when he would marry her.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The Prince of Wales tonight is giving a dinner in the House of Lords to 321 ex-soldiers from all over the British empire who by their individual heroism won the Victoria cross, the highest honor in the British army, during the World War.

Some of those attending have no arms. Others lost their legs in the war. Two are totally blind.

Places at the table were drawn by lot. Viscount Gort was to sit on the left of the prince. Former Sergeant Burman, a chauffeur, was to flank his royal highness on the right.

This dinner was the Prince's own idea and was suggested by him to the British Legion several months ago as the best way in which he might "do his share" on the eleventh anniversary of the Armistice towards remembering the men who risked their lives to save the future throne.

Realizing that these men came from every rank in life and that many might be ill at ease in the presence of the heir to the throne, the prince stipulated that the dinner was to be entirely informal and that all should come in lounge suits. So tonight these men, who by their bravery under fire won a little bronze medal inscribed "for valour," will gather in a banquet hall usually frequented by the peasantry of England.

That the war heroes have been quickly forgotten with the passing of time was clearly brought out during the efforts to bring these men together.

FIRST HOOVER BUDGET COMPLETE IN TENTATIVE FORM

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The first budget of the Hoover administration was complete in its tentative form today for submission to congress next December.

As announced by President Hoover himself, federal expenditures for the fiscal year 1930-31 have been set at $3,330,000,000, exclusive of the usual deficiencies that will be incurred and of any appropriation for the federal farm board.

The total expenditures for the current fiscal year, including original appropriations and deficiencies, have been $3,241,000,000, according to Mr. Hoover's announcement. Here again, the executive excluded the $150,000,000 allotted to the farm board.

The first figure of the Hoover regime and the last of the Coolidge administration are thus a little hard to compare, as, while simple subtraction would indicate a reduction of $111,000,000 for next year, no account can be taken of the deficiencies that will be run up. It is probable, however, they will ultimately be found to be approximately on the same level.

ROMANCE COMES AGAIN TO PASTOR; WEDS FORMER NURSE

UHRICHVILLE, O., Nov. 9.—A romance which bloomed forth from the dying ashes of a minister's matrimonial career which crashed on the rocks when his wife accused him of allowing the fire of his love for her to cool, flaring instead for a foster laughter, is responsible today for the marriage of Rev. Floyd L. Ash, former pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church here, and Mrs. Ina M. Stubbins, of Uhrichville.

Rev. Ash, who is now pastor of the churches at Maynard, Pleasant Grove and Dillonville in eastern Ohio, announced that he had wed Mrs. Stubbins, but would not tell when or where, though he stated the ceremony was performed in West Virginia.

Mrs. Stubbins is the widow of a man at whose funeral services Rev. Ash, now her husband, participated.

When the first Mrs. Ash filed the sensational divorce charges against her husband, she suffered a nervous breakdown and at one period during the divorce trial, he was carried into court seated in a rocking chair.

Mrs. Stubbins, a nurse, was called in to attend the minister.

The first Mrs. Ash charged that her husband was cruel to her and named a 16-year-old adopted daughter as co-respondent, making several sensational charges of alleged improper actions between the minister and the adopted daughter.

The divorce was granted on the grounds of cruelty.

ELYRIA PLANT IS WRECKED; LIGHTED CIGARETTE BLAMED

Warning Of Fellow Workman Comes Too Late

ELYRIA, O., Nov. 9.—Five workmen were killed and four seriously injured when a terrific gas explosion wrecked the plant of the Timm Spring Co., here this morning.

The blast occurred shortly after seven a. m., as the workmen were entering the plant.

Only one of the dead men is identified so far. He is John Raple, 21, a workman.

All of the bodies of the dead men were horribly mangled, making immediate identification difficult.

The blast is believed to have resulted when one of the workmen lighted a cigarette.

Sam Husted, one of the workmen in the plant who was injured in the blast, held authorities he smelled gas as soon as he entered the building this morning. He said he saw a fellow-workman pull out a match to a light a cigarette.

"Don't light that match," Husted said he yelled to the man. "We'll all be blown to hell."

The warning came too late, however.

The next instant the terrific blast split, shattering the entire structure. A few minutes later flames leaped out of the wreckage and spread rapidly.

The shock of the explosion was felt all over the city. Scores of windows nearby the Timm plant caught on fire.

All available men of the police and fire departments were rushed to the scene of the explosion. Scores of volunteers aided in getting the situation under hand.

The Timm plant employs fifty men. Because of the early hour many had not arrived at the building. Had the blast occurred a few minutes later the loss of life would undoubtedly have been greater.

POLICE LINK SHOT WITH UNION LOCKOUT

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—As hope grew today for an early settlement of the lockout of 2,500 members of the Chicago Cleaners and Dyers Union, the dispute was believed by Blue Island police to be responsible for the firing of a shot into the establishment of Jean Caravette.

Authorities were holding Frank Amato, 17, who entered the shop about the time the shot was fired. Although he is being questioned no charge has been lodged against him.

A joint conference between officers of the Master Cleaners and Dyers' Association and members of the Cleaners, Dyers and Pressers Union was continued today.

LADY EDISON COMES TO RESCUE OF STENOGRAPHERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—An invention which is hoped to reduce the labor of the army of business stenographers will receive a public demonstration next Tuesday.

"Lady Edison," (Beulah Louise Henry) is the scientific mother of the device. It consists of an attachable ribbon for any typewriter which, it is claimed, will eliminate the necessity of using carbon paper.

"Lady Edison," descendant of Patrick Henry, and granddaughter of former Governor Holden, of North Carolina, has forty-three successful inventions to her credit.

"I know nothing of mechanics," she said today. "I believe I have a strong psychic power. The idea for an invention strikes me suddenly and then it is as good as completed. I direct the construction through expert mechanics."

Among the many articles which "Lady Edison" has produced are numerous ingeniously-constructed dolls and toys.

"I believe that the spirit of some little dead child communicates with me and suggests the ideas to me for these toys," Miss Henry said.

The inventress is an individual type of spiritualist. She has never attended a seance.

MARKET CRASH COSTS OMAHA PIANIST $900,000

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—"I lost every cent I had in the Wall Street market crash."

Rather ruefully, Miss Margaret Shotwell of Omaha, concert pianist, now in New York, made this assertion today in her suite at the Savoy-Plaza. Not only is her fortune of $900,000 wiped out but, she said, she is indebted to her brokers to the extent of $50,000.

"I must get down to hard work now," said the 22-year-old pianist who became famous when she inherited $1,000,000.

"I'm going to give up my suite here and go to Omaha in a few days to settle my affairs. I shall return to New York and take a small apartment. I shall keep up my piano works."

And then—philosophically—the young woman added: "Well, I was just one of the suckers. There were many others."

Miss Shotwell said she was in

The woman, whose maiden name is Dora E. Smith, swore to the following affidavit:

"To whom it may concern: I, Dora E. Monroe, being of sound mind and memory, do hereby make the following statement:

"Soon after the bombing in California, my brother, Lewis Smith, confessed to me that he was the one who threw the bomb."

"He came to me with these words, 'Dora, I have something to tell you. It has been on my mind and I will have to tell someone, and you're the only one I can trust. It was not Tom Mooney who threw the bomb into that crowd. It was me and Mooney was not even present.'"

"He (my brother) told me how he stood on the roof above that 'monstrous crowd' and hurled the bomb into its midst. I have not revealed this statement before because of a promise I made to my brother."

"In the State of Ohio, Belmont County, Mrs. Dora E. Monroe, being duly sworn says that the foregoing statements are the truth and nothing but the truth as I verily believe."

The affidavit was signed by C. C. Mackey, a newspaper reporter, and Thomas W. Carroll, a notary public.

TELEPHONE DEVICE SPEAKS NUMBER TO CENTRAL BY RADIO

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—The "talkies" have invaded the telephone field.

A new "talkie" device by which a dial telephone speaks its called numbers to Central while the subscriber maintains silence has been perfected by the Bell Telephone laboratories and, according to the company, will be in use here soon.

With the new automatic telephone which was demonstrated last night before the Telephone Pioneers Society by Sergius P. Grace, assistant vice president of the Bell laboratories, no one is required to utter a sound. The subscriber merely dials the number desired and the new invention speaks the number to Central, to whom it alone is audible.

Grace demonstrated the device by carrying into the audience a telephone with a long cord connected with a loudspeaker which represented Central. A member of the audience dialed 8561-T. There was no sound save the clicking of the dial. Two seconds later, the loudspeaker spoke up clearly, in an almost human voice, "8561-T."

Grace also showed how a telephoned message could be transmitted through the body of one man to the ear of another, or through the bodies of two or three men, if they joined hands.

All Modern Improvements

JIM AND SALLY knew what they were doing when they bought the old Jones house. It was hopelessly out of date as far as looks and modern comforts went, but it was staunchly built and had a good sized lot, and they got it for a song.

Jim's salary wasn't very big, so they didn't try to do everything at once. They began with the furnace. They read the heater advertisements. They chose just the equipment they wanted and had it installed. Then they started reading up on bathrooms and plumbing. The following year they studied woodwork advertising, and replaced the old gingerbread porch with a pretty colonial doorway. Of course the house needed painting after that and they found a dream of a color scheme suggested in an advertisement. Later came new flooring, fresh wall paper, attractive lighting fixtures, shrubbery for the lawn.

Jim and Sally have one of the prettiest homes in town. "Where did you get such wonderful ideas?" their friends ask, and Sally smiles.

"We simply knew what we wanted before we bought it," she replies. "Anyone can, who reads the advertisements."

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

HEARING AND HEEDING—Take heed therefore how ye hear: for whosoever hath, to him shall be given; and whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have.—Luke 8:18.

NO ONE MAN CAN DO IT

As a preliminary to an appearance before the District of Columbia grand jury to tell what he knows about the Fahey dinner, Senator Brookhart strutted his stuff before his more or less admiring colleagues and an interested gallery, and in the course of his remarks asserted that Secretary Mellon should be removed as the chief prohibition law enforcement officer, and a "Smedley Butler, or somebody like him who means business to enforce this law," put in his place.

General Butler unquestionably did his best to make the dry law effective while he was in charge of things in Philadelphia, but there is nothing to indicate that on the whole he was any more successful in the City of Brotherly Love than the secretary of the treasury, acting through a special assistant secretary has been in the country at large. Indeed, there is nothing in his record to suggest that the general has the knack of managing things in the civilian world.

Lack of prohibition enforcement is not the fault of the executive department of the government. The responsibility lies largely on the shoulders of several million people who have adopted an attitude of non-co-operation, to put it mildly; and somewhat on the shoulders of those members of the senate and house of representatives who have insisted upon making the selection of the personnel of the enforcement agencies a matter of politics and patronage. The suggestion that any one person can take charge of federal enforcement activities and "put the thing over" by personal diligence and aggressiveness is pure humbug. It is scarcely credible that Mr. Brookhart is so naive that he does not know it.

ESSENCE OF PERJURY

A witness before the senate lobby probing committee was warned by Senator Thomas J. Walsh "that perjury consists in saying a thing is a fact that the perjurer doesn't know is a fact, as well as in making an assertion that is an untruth." A senate committee might accept that definition. We doubt if any reputable court of law would.

The essence of perjury is wilfulness. Stating as a fact what a witness under oath knows he does not know to be a fact has been held to constitute perjury; but that is quite a different thing from stating as a fact what a witness does not know he does not know to be a fact. A person may honestly believe that he knows a lot of things that he doesn't know at all. A witness who testifies to a fact of which he is knowingly ignorant deliberately takes a chance with the truth. A witness who states as a fact what he believes to be a fact, although actually he does not know it to be on, takes a chance with the truth; but he does so unconsciously and without corrupt intent. The element of wilfulness is absent.

The courts find enough perjury to deal with, as it is, without extending the boundaries of false testimony to bring in new accumulations of it. We really know so very little that Senator Walsh's dictum would make witnesses know even less on the stand than the most cautious of them do now. At a guess, about nine out of ten statements of fact today subsequently will be shown to be more or less variance with the truth. At least history shows that to have been about the record of the past.

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

THE COWARD

It was a clever conception to make a coward the hero of a novel. I understand it has been done heretofore, but Graham Green, a new novelist, has done it beautifully in "The Man Within." The hero is this and that, thus and so, but whatever else you may say about him, he is what is generally called a coward.

I believe that there is a great deal of nonsense talked and written about bravery. I believe that all normal, sensible, sane people are afraid of physical injury. They are also afraid of many other things and forces and conditions, but they certainly have in common a fear of bodily injury or hurt.

There are all kinds of people in the world, so, of course there probably are some who are never afraid of physical pain or injury. It would be difficult to find them, however. So many millions pretend to be unafraid, that it is never, with any system of testing that I can imagine, find out the ones who really aren't afraid.

If you were to find those few who are utterly devoid of physical fear, I think you'd have a group of low-grade morons on your hands.

The human animal has been taught, through ages of experience, to shrink from that which hurts, because that which hurts may destroy him. There is no sense in setting himself in the way of destruction, so the human with sense gets out of the way of that which will hurt.

For instance, the fighter. Take the village bully, who goes about looking for a fight. He brags that he is not afraid of anybody. In the old days he used to walk into the saloon, throw his coat over the bar, and announce that he would lick any man in the house. Was he unafraid? Certainly not. He underwent tortures of fear, while waiting for some poor fool to accept his challenge.

He was merely using the only means at his command to attract attention. That was his way of becoming a prominent citizen. He feared injury and pain, but he would risk it in order to put up a front.

A militaristic age has handed down to us the term "coward" as an epithet of shame. That's because there was a time when all men had to be forced, somehow, to fight, and one way to force them was to shame them. In our more civilized time, there are other qualities that are more valuable than bravery. So we can appreciate a novel whose hero is a coward.

THE WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

THINKING IT OVER

An Idaho man has just been married to a woman from whom he had been divorced thirty years before. It takes some men thirty years to discover when they were well off.

AMBITION

Ambition, toward which the school boy and the young man are constantly driven, may in the end prove to be an over-rated quality. It has been said that ambition often breaks the ties of blood and forgets the obligations of gratitude. No ambition which can live in the mind of man is worth the price of gratitude. Better an average life with no great ambition fulfilled or even conceived than to reach the peak by a policy of ingratitude or unkindness.

THE MAIN THING

After all, perhaps the main thing in life is adherence to a principle in which you believe and which expresses the best that is in you. All of us dread anything that may endanger our happiness. We even dread anything that may deprive us of convenience or comfort. It is hard to accept the fact, at first, that convenience and comfort or even temporary happiness may not be of the first importance. To follow a principle is not easy but it has its compensations.

AS TO SAVING AND SPENDING

A great deal is written about thrift and the habit of saving. Much that is not written is not true and much that is true is not understood. There is too much saving of the wrong kind—too little inclination to spend largely for large results. There are so many people who practice thrift in the wrong way. They save pennies and dimes and then lose all in impulsive, thoughtless investment. Others slip away carelessly, but have no inclination to give largely for good purposes.

MISSING PART OF LIFE

In the autumn the trees march in a gorgeous pageant against the hazy blue sky and along winding roads. The open country in October and early November does something for the souls of those who will give the autumn a chance. There are too many of us who hear about the loveliness of woodland and of field, who read about it in books, but who don't get around to see it. We let a dozen other concerns, which we foolishly think more important, keep us in town and city. The beauty and wonder of the changing seasons make up a great part of existence on this planet. Those who miss it are missing a part of life.

DEPORTED MEXICANS SAID TO LEAVE LARGE LABOR GAP

By ARTHUR M. FREE

Congressman from California (Arthur Monroe Free was born at San Jose, Calif., Jan. 15, 1879. He attended College of the Pacific and was graduated from Stanford university with an LL. B. degree. In 1903 he began practicing law at San Jose. He was district attorney of Santa Clara county from 1907 to 1919. Elected to congress in 1921 from the eighth California district, he has been returned each term since. He is a Republican.)

Mexican laborers are being deported from the United States to such an extent that farmers along the border and in California are being forced to curtail operations for lack of workers, while railroads and other industries are suffering for the same reason.

The number of Mexicans now entering the United States is only 40 per cent of what it was in past years, and a tightening of the border patrol has practically stopped illegal entries.

Statistics of the department of labor indicate that approximately 10,000 Mexicans will be deported in the year ending June 30, 1930.

I stated during the last session of congress that if the present law is enforced there would be no necessity for any new legislation for restricting immigration of Mexicans into the United States. That statement is being borne out by data now in the possession of the department of labor giving the present range of admissions across the Mexican border.

We have deported so many to Mexico that farmers on the United States side of the line cannot get adequate help. I am informed that one farmer in the Imperial valley of California, who has been in the habit of cultivating 1,000 acres planted to vegetables, melons and cotton has had to cut his acreage in half for lack of farm labor.

Some of the towns on the United States side along the Mexican border look like deserted villages for the same reason. Railroads along the border are having difficulty in getting track help to work through the desert stretches because of the absence of Mexican labor.

The Mexicans coming into the United States, under the existing law, have to demonstrate ability to read and to write. They have to be physically perfect. They cannot even be cross-eyed and get past. They must pay a head tax of $8 and a visa fee of $10 and if anybody else but themselves pays those taxes or fees they are subject to being sent back to Mexico.

The Mexican government is co-operating in this effort to keep down the inflow of their labor into this country, because Mexico wants to keep its real labor

SINGIN' IN THE RAIN!

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

I am going to devote this article to hand and arm massage, and have particularly asked the question above, because I have been especially noticing hands of late. It is amazing how much older the hands of the average person look than the face. Even in very young girls it is not uncommon to see wrinkled hands on which the veins are too prominent.

I know of nothing better than massaging with a good hand cream to remove these premature signs of age.

After massaging cream into the face according to my directions of yesterday, you will find that there is still a little cream left on your fingers. Instead of wiping or washing this away, massage it into your hands with the same manipulation which you use when putting on a tight glove. Be sure to massage the joints and the bones of the fingers. A good hand cream, applied in this manner before bedtime, and allowed to remain overnight, will soon obliterate wrinkles and lessen the tendency to prominent veins.

The forearms very frequently need massage, particularly if they are inclined to become fat. Here the massage should be diagonal or spiral, following the lay of the muscles.

The elbows should come in for special attention. Take a bit of the nourishing cream and massage it into the entire area about the elbows until most of it has been absorbed. The fashion of the new season has given the elbows a conspicuous place, since all the evening gowns are sleeveless and of such delicate fabrics as to make conspicuous any coarse skin about the elbows.

No woman can hope to be considered well groomed unless she has accorded her hands and elbows the proper amount of attention due them.

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, has earned a vacation, as one of America's delegates at the London naval limitations conference early next year.

Ever since his colleague, George Wharton Pepper's term ended two years ago last March 4, and the senate refused to seat William S. Vare as George W.'s successor, the Pittsburgher (Senator Reed's home is in the smoky city) has been the Keystone state's lone representative in the upper house of congress.

Doing double duty for so long, with a re-election campaign of his own thrown in for good measure, is enough to wear any senator to a frazzle.

Besides, the Pennsylvanian has had to carry the bulk of the load involved in fighting the tariff bill all through the extra session.

Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, as chairman of the finance committee, which got the bill into the shape in which it was intended to have it passed, was supposed to have charge of the job of getting it favorably acted in without too many alterations.

Senator Smoot, however, is not much of a scrapper. He knows more about protective tariffs than any other man in Washington, and is a wonder at framing them up, so as to yield the maximum amount of profit to the protected interests, but he is easy to squelch in a free-for-all argument.

This bill has proved to require a lot of argument—very rough, some of it. Seeing Smoot getting decidedly the worst of it, Reed—whose state is more interested in barrels of protection than any other two or three states put together—was forced to jump into the arena to help him; whereupon Senator Smoot promptly slipped out from under, and Reed has had to go ahead with the rumpus almost single-handed.

Senator Reed, in anything like a protective tariff fight, has the quality of boundless sincerity in common with Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut.

That is, they both are wholeheartedly and absolutely honestly convinced that most people are morons, with no idea how to take care of themselves, and that plenty of special privileges ought to be granted to the very few whom nature has blessed with brains, in order to enable them to do their best by the bone-headed masses.

(and, of course, to reward the brainy folk for doing it.)

The difference between Reed and Bingham is that Bingham is so unsophisticated as to express this notion quite candidly; whereas Reed is more tactful about it.

The truth is that a leader of Reed's views (Bingham's views are equally all right for the purpose, but not his judgment) is needed to wage a high fight effectively.

It obviously is a fight in favor of special privilege. The individual who conducts it must believe profoundly in special privilege's righteousness, or everything he says is bound to sound hypocritical. Reed's utterances never have sounded so for a minute. At all stages of the game he has given every evidence of being a true believer.

Nevertheless, he has had to work like a Trojan. A nice long rest over in the refined atmosphere of diplomatic London is fairly common to him.

The only question is: What will become of Pennsylvania in Reed's absence? It cannot safely do without any senator in this country whatever. The natural assumption is that the Vare case is on the eve of being settled—which certainly cannot be by any other method than Senator-elect Vare's final, definite exclusion.

And that is all arranged for Governor Fisher to appoint a senatorial partner to Reed between now and next January.

Many politicians believe it will be "Old Joe" Grundy. There is nothing the matter with Grundy's sincerity, and all Washington takes off its hat to his ability as a "fixer," but he hasn't it in him to be as fluent as Reed on the senate floor, by a long shot.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint

Meat Loaf Grilled Potatoes
Scalloped Onions and Carrots
Shredded Cabbage with French Dressing
Apple Tarts Coffee
or
Sliced Ham with Pineapple
Baked Sweet Potatoes
Celery Date Pudding
Whipped Cream
Coffee

These two menus are prepared in the oven. Neither menu would take more than an hour to bake and a little more than that to prepare. In preparing the first, the meat loaf should be made and put in to bake first, then the carrots and onions, then the apple tarts should be prepared, while the first courses are being taken out and served. In the second one the date pudding had better be first, so that it may cool before serving.

Today's Recipes

Grilled Potatoes—Scrub and boil potatoes until almost tender. Cool, pare and slice one-fourth inch thick, lengthwise. Dot with melted butter or salad oil and cook on both sides under a broiler or in lower grill pan until brown. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Sweet potatoes may be cooked the same way.

Scalloped Carrots and Onions—Six medium-sized carrots, six good-sized onions, seasoning, butter, one cup milk, breadcrumbs. Slice the carrots and onions into a greased casserole in alternate layers, seasoning each layer with salt, pepper and butter. Pour the milk over the layers, cover with fine breadcrumbs and bake in a slow oven (250-300 degrees Fahrenheit) about three-quarters of an hour.

Date Souffle—One cup sugar, two eggs, one tablespoon flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one cup English walnuts, one cup dates, seeded and cut in half. Pour in a flat tin and bake 20 minutes in moderate oven. Serve cold with whipped cream.

Suggestions

Orange Salad, Serving Six
Eighteen slices of orange, one cup diced celery, six dates, seeded; one-half cup French dressing. Mix and chill the ingredients. Serve in cups of crisp lettuce.

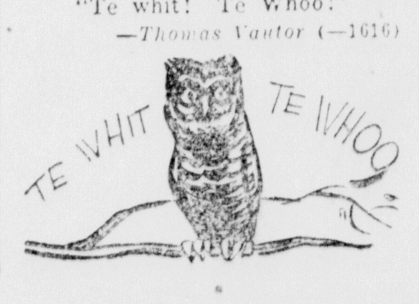

If the population of South Africa goes on increasing within the next 50 years at the present rate, the white population will increase to 4,000,000, and the blacks to 27,000,000.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

Pimples.

"DEAR DOCTOR: Although I possess a very clear skin, I am bothered with a continuous run of pimples on my face. I have done everything I know to cure them—dieting and all. My bowel action is normal; I have an hour's fresh air and walk two or three miles daily; eat large quantities of fresh vegetables, fruit and milk; little meat and few eggs; no eating between meals and no candy or rich foods of any kind; two glasses of cold water on arising. My height is 5 ft. 6 in., and my weight is 115.

"These pimples seem to run in the family. Might I inherit the tendency to them? It seems too unfair when I watch other girls eat all kinds of rich food—ice cream, sodas, etc., and I haven't touch them. MRS. O."

You evidently have acne, Mrs. O. It is very common in young people, and stubborn to cure. While you think your diet is right, I suspect that is not quite sufficient, for if you are 5 ft. 6 in. tall and weigh only 115 pounds, you are from 25 to 30 pounds underweight. This looks as though you are not getting enough, and any diet that is not correct in amount, or otherwise, lowers the destroying powers of the blood and tissue fluids for any germs that may happen around. In other words, the resistance is lowered.

While your fresh fruits and vegetables would take care of your vitamins and mineral elements it is probable you are not getting enough energy foods, and it may be that you are not getting enough protein. In recent years the need of vitamins has been emphasized more than anything else, because they are the latest discovery in nutrition and are most apt to be deficient in the ordinary diet, but we mustn't forget that sufficient of the other elements are necessary also. If I were you, I would try to gain some weight and see what effect that would have.

You are right about omitting candy and rich foods, especially those rich in free fat (cream is not a free fat, but an emulsified fat), but you might eat more of the whole grain breads and cereals and perhaps take more vegetables and milk. Perhaps you need to rest more than you do.

About diseases "running" in families: We do know that the tendency towards certain diseases may be inherited, perhaps because the "pattern" of organs is inherited, and some types of organs are more susceptible to certain diseases than others. For instance, the long, narrow chest seems to be more susceptible to tuberculosis. But it does not follow, by any means, that these certain diseases must be acquired, for there are many other factors concerned in acquiring a disease, and these factors can largely be controlled.

Reasoning from this, it may be that you have inherited the pattern for large oil glands on your face. These glands have an over-secretion of sebum or skin oil which sometimes hardens in the pores and forms blackheads or comedones. The beginning of the acne pimples are always in these blackheads, so part of the treatment of acne is their prevention and removal after formation. This may be accomplished by a thorough washing twice a day with some mild toilet soap and hot water, then wiping the affected areas with some antiseptic solution such as peroxide of hydrogen, diluted half and half with water, or a solution of alcohol or bay rum or toilet water, then the extraction of the blackheads. This is best done with what is known as a comedone extractor. Follow this again with antiseptic solution. This I would follow with a little glycerine solution—one part of glycerine to four of water.

For further directions for home treatment, will you send for our article Acne? In the home treatment isn't effective, you should see a skin specialist, Mrs. O.

Living and Loving

No wonder parents hate to see their children grow up. For when they reach their middle or late teens they are so often bitten by the marriage bug, and then what to do, what to do?

Some parents combat this curse by forbidding their girls to have boy friends, innocently thinking that they are preventing them from having boy friends at all. And they keep their boy short of funds so he cannot take a girl out.

Both of which tactics are neatly defeated by the young folk, who see their friends unbeknown to the parents. In fact, this course leads directly to the evil they are trying to avoid—an early marriage and elopement at that.

You can talk over the economic aspects of the case until you are blue in the face, and it does no good. You can point out duties to parents, the desirability of first acquiring an education, the changes that are likely to take place in the youngsters' feelings and tastes in the next few years, and the fact that youth is short and marriage lasts for years and years, all to no purpose.

The two fond young hearts yearn for one another, and anything that keeps them apart is just too cruel. What's the answer? The trial marriage, as advocated by Judge Ben Lindsey? I am not wise enough to say I only know that if these headstrong youngsters won't be deterred from hieing themselves to the minister or the justice, and being made ONE, the only thing for parents to do is to accept the inevitable and continue to help and love the young people. And it is surprising how many happy marriages do come from the union of two immature youngsters. We parents may rave, but we must admit that.

The following letter is from a little girl who is in love, and wants to get married soon. She is 10 young, and had much better wait a while. I wonder what per cent of the juveniles who write to ask my advice on this subject pay any attention when I answer them.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I'm a young girl 17, and have been going with a boy for the past six months. Lately my family has turned against him, and forbidden me to see him. We love each other dearly. He asked me to marry him, but I am afraid my family would not agree. He said when I was 18 we could elope. I know he would make me happy.

"Do you think it advisable for me to get married? I know his family would like me, and I like him very much. I will be waiting patiently to hear from you.

It might be possible that you would be happy married to your boy friend, dear, but I am glad you are waiting until you are 18. I think young people who marry so early are cheating themselves out of a lot of good times that come but once, and that they take on a lot of responsibilities that make them older.

Probably your parents thought you were getting too serious in your love for one another, and that is the reason they discouraged the friendship. Wait until you are 18, at least, and then, if possible, until you are at least 21.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: For the past two years I have gone with the same girl. I love her dearly. Her family has just moved away, and she has gotten into a crowd of the younger set of which I am a little 'shaker.' There is a young fellow down there three or four years her senior.

"I recently made a trip down there, and all I heard was this chap's name. Now, do you think she cares, or is she trying to make me jealous? What would you advise me to do, continue to care for her or just drop the subject altogether? A CADET."

I think I'd trust her a while longer. Cadet, and drop the subject with her. She may have a passing crush on this boy, or may like him in an entirely different way than she does you. Unless you have more reason than you state for doubting her love, I believe I would trust and continue to love her.

FAITH: The only thing you can do, dear is to treat the man as nicely as possible. Make him feel that you are his friend always, as you are, if you really care for him. Even if he loves another girl, you wish him to be happy, don't you? You do if you care the right way. It is quite possible that he is waiting until you have finished school, to show how very much interested in you he is. He certainly can't be indifferent, or he would not have asked for your picture. This is my advice: Be calm, be friendly, and live up to the name with which you signed your letter. Have faith.

Peter's Adventures

IN THE HOLE

"What does it matter whether he lifted the roof on purpose or because he didn't know any better?" cried a shrill voice. "While you two are talking I am being crushed to death under the strangle."

This is no time to wrangle over who he is and why he is here. The thing to do is for all of you to get together and help get me out of this mess. If the fellow is no enemy after all, and really did fall upon me because he could not help it, he can't be much more at ease than I am. Give him a hand-up, brothers, can't you?"

This appeal stirred the queer little creature to action. Again little claws clutched at his coat, but this time they were more gentle and did not scratch him. Peter did his best to wriggle himself free, but he must have hurt the poor little fellow, and Peter was bruised and shaken by his fall. But finally he worked one arm free and his hand came into contact with a hard, cold, sharp object. The end of a stone, of course! Peter knew it for what it was, in a second.

The crowding creatures stepped back and out of the way, and true to his word, Peter set about making good his promise. The hole was narrow, and Peter was bruised and shaken by his fall. BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

HEARING AND HEEDING—Take heed therefore how ye hear: for whosoever hath, to him shall be given; and whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have.—Luke 8:18.

NO ONE MAN CAN DO IT

As a preliminary to an appearance before the District of Columbia grand jury to tell what he knows about the Fahey dinner, Senator Brookhart strutted his stuff before his more or less admiring colleagues and an interested gallery, and in the course of his remarks asserted that Secretary Mellon should be removed as the chief prohibition law enforcement officer, and a "Smedley Butler, or somebody like him who means business to enforce this law," put in his place.

General Butler unquestionably did his best to make the dry law effective while he was in charge of things in Philadelphia, but there is nothing to indicate that on the whole he was any more successful in the City of Brotherly Love than the secretary of the treasury, acting through a special assistant secretary has been in the country at large. Indeed, there is nothing in his record to suggest that the general has the knack of managing things in the civilian world.

Lack of prohibition enforcement is not the fault of the executive department of the government. The responsibility lies largely on the shoulders of several million people who have adopted an attitude of non-co-operation, to put it mildly; and somewhat on the shoulders of those members of the senate and house of representatives who have insisted upon making the selection of the personnel of the enforcement agencies a matter of politics and patronage. The suggestion that any one person can take charge of federal enforcement activities and "put the thing over" by personal diligence and aggressiveness is pure buncombe. It is scarcely credible that Mr. Brookhart is so naive that he does not know it.

ESSENCE OF PERJURY

A witness before the senate lobby probing committee was warned by Senator Thomas J. Walsh "that perjury consists in saying a thing is a fact that the perjurer doesn't know is a fact, as well as in making an assertion that is an untruth." A senate committee might accept that definition. We doubt if any reputable court of law would.

The essence of perjury is wilfulness. Stating as a fact what a witness under oath knows he does not know to be a fact has been held to constitute perjury; but that is quite a different thing from stating as a fact what a witness does not know he does not know to be a fact. A person may honestly believe that he knows a lot of things that he doesn't know at all. A witness who testifies to a fact of which he is knowingly ignorant deliberately takes a chance with the truth. A witness who states as a fact what he believes to be a fact, although actually he does not know it to be on, takes a chance with the truth; but he does so unconsciously and without corrupt intent. The element of wilfulness is absent.

The courts find enough perjury to deal with, as it is, without extending the boundaries of false testimony to bring in new accumulations of it. We really know so very little that Senator Walsh's dictum would make witnesses know even less on the stand than the most cautious of them do now. At a guess, about nine out of ten statements of fact today subsequently will be shown to be more or less variance with the truth. At least history shows that to have been about the record of the past.

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

THE COWARD

It was a clever conception to make a coward the hero of a novel. I understand it has been done before, but Graham Green, a new novelist, has done it beautifully in "The Man Within." The hero is this and that, thus and so, but whatever else you may say about him, he is what is generally called a coward.

I believe that there is a great deal of nonsense talked and written about bravery. I believe that all normal, sensible, sane people are afraid of physical injury. They are also afraid of many other things and forces and conditions, but they certainly have in common a fear of bodily injury or hurt.

There are all kinds of people in the world, so, of course there probably are some who are never afraid of physical pain or injury. It would be difficult to find them, however. So many millions pretend to be unafraid, that you'd never, with any system of testing that I can imagine, find out the ones who really aren't afraid.

If you were to find those few who are utterly devoid of physical fear, I think you'd have a group of low-grade morons on your hands.

The human animal has been taught, through ages of experience, to shrink from that which hurts, because that which hurts may destroy him. There is no sense in setting himself in the way of destruction, so the human with sense gets out of the way of that which will hurt.

For instance, the fighter, that village bully, who goes about looking for a fight. He brags that he is not afraid of anybody. In the old days he used to walk into the saloon, throw his coat over the bar, and announce that he could lick any man in the house. Was he unafraid? Certainly not. He underwent tortures of fear, while waiting for some poor fool to accept his challenge.

He was merely using the only means at his command to attract attention. That was his way of becoming a prominent citizen. He feared injury and pain, but he would risk it in order to put up a front.

A militaristic age has handed down to us the term "coward" as an epithet of shame. That's because there was a time when all men had to be forced, somehow, to fight, and one way to force them was to shame them. In our more civilized time, there are other qualities that are more valuable than bravery. So we can appreciate a novel whose hero is a coward.

THE WAY of the WORLD

THINKING IT OVER

An Idaho man has just been married to a woman from whom he had been divorced thirty years before. It takes some men thirty years to discover when they were well off.

AMBITION

Ambition, toward which the school boy and the young man are constantly driven, may in the end prove to be an over-rated quality. It has been said that ambition often breaks the ties of blood and forgets the obligations of gratitude. No ambition which can live in the mind of man is worth the price of gratitude. Better an average life with no great ambition fulfilled or even conceived than to reach the peak by a policy of ingratitude or unkindness.

THE MAIN THING

After all, perhaps the main thing in life is adherence to a principle in which you believe and which expresses the best that is in you. All of us dread anything that may endanger our happiness. We even dread anything that may deprive us of convenience or comfort. It is hard to accept the fact, at first, that convenience and comfort or even temporary happiness may not be of the first importance. To follow a principle is not easy but it has its compensations.

AS TO SAVING AND SPENDING

A great deal is written about thrift and the habit of saving. Much that is not written is not true and much that is true is not understood. There is too much saving of the wrong kind—too little inclination to spend largely to gain large results. There are so many people who practice thrift in the wrong way. They save pennies and dimes and then lose all in impulsive, thoughtlessness investment. Others let pennies, dimes and dollars slip away carelessly, but have no inclination to give largely for good purposes.

MISSING PART OF LIFE

In the autumn the trees march in a gorgeous pageant against the hazy blue sky and along winding roads. The open country in October and early November does something for the souls of those who will give the autumn a chance. There are too many of us who hear about the loveliness of woodland and of field, who read about it in books, but who don't get around to see it. We let a dozen other concerns, which we foolishly think more important, keep us in town and city. The beauty and wonder of the changing seasons make up a great part of existence on this planet. Those who miss it are missing a part of life.

DEPORTED MEXICANS SAID TO LEAVE LARGE LABOR GAP

By ARTHUR M. FREE

Congressman from California (Arthur Monroe Free was born at San Jose, Calif., Jan. 15, 1879. He attended College of the Pacific and was graduated from Stanford university with an LL.B. degree. In 1903 he began practicing law at San Jose. He was district attorney of Santa Clara county from 1907 to 1919. Elected to congress in 1921 from the eighth California district, he has been returned each term since. He is a Republican.)

Mexican laborers are being deported from the United States to such an extent that farmers along the border and in California are being forced to curtail operations for lack of workers, while railroads and other industries are suffering for the same reason.

The number of Mexicans now entering the United States is only 40 per cent of what it was in past years, and a tightening of the border patrol has practically stopped illegal entries.

Statistics of the department of labor indicate that approximately 10,000 Mexicans will be deported in the year ending June 30, 1930.

I stated during the last session of congress that if the present law is enforced there would be no necessity for any new legislation for restricting immigration of Mexicans into the United States. That statement is being borne out by data now in the possession of the department of labor giving the present range of admissions across the Mexican border.

We have deported so many to Mexico that farmers on the United States side of the line cannot get adequate help. I am informed that one farmer in the Imperial valley of California, who has been in the habit of cultivating 1,000 acres planted to vegetables, melons and cotton had had to cut his acreage in half for lack of farm labor.

Some of the towns on the United States side along the Mexican border look like deserted villages for the same reason. Railroads along the border are having difficulty in getting track help to work through the desert stretches because of the absence of Mexican labor.

The Mexicans coming into the United States, under the existing law, have to demonstrate ability to read and to write. They have to be physically perfect. They cannot even be cross-eyed and get past. They must pay a head tax of $8 and a visa fee of $10 and if anybody else but themselves pays those taxes or fees they are subject to being sent back to Mexico.

The Mexican government is operating in this effort to keep down the inflow of their labor into this country because Mexico wants to keep its real labor

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

I am going to devote this article to hand and arm massage, and have particularly asked the question above, because I have been especially noticing hands of late. It is amazing how much older the hands of the average person look than the face. Even in very young girls it is not uncommon to see wrinkled hands on which the veins are too prominent.

I know of nothing better than massaging with a good hand cream to remove these premature signs of age.

After massaging cream into the face according to my directions of yesterday, you will find that there is still a little cream left on your fingers. Instead of wiping or washing this away, massage it into your hands with the same manipulation which you use when putting on a tight glove. Be sure to massage the joints and the bones of the fingers. A good hand cream, applied in this manner before bedtime, and

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, has earned a vacation, as one of America's delegates at the London naval limitations conference early next year.

Ever since his colleague, George Wharton Pepper's term ended two years ago last March 4, and the senate refused to reseat William S. Vare as George W.'s successor, the Pittsburgher (Senator Reed's home is in the smoky city) has been the Keystone state's lone representative in the upper house of congress.

Doing double duty for so long, with a re-election campaign of his own thrown in for good measure, is enough to wear any senator to a frazzle.

Besides, the Pennsylvanian has had to carry the bulk of the load involved in fighting the tariff bill all through the extra session.

Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, as chairman of the finance committee, which got the bill into the shape in which it was intended to have charge of the job of getting it favorably acted in without too many alterations.

Senator Smoot, however, is not much of a scrapper. He knows more about protective tariffs than any other man in Washington, and is a wonder at framing them up, so as to yield the maximum amount of profit to the protected interests, but he is easy to squelch in a free-for-all argument.

This bill has proved to require a lot of argument—very rough, some of it. Seeing Smoot getting decidedly the worst of it, Reed—whose state is more interested in barrels of protection than any other two or three states put together—was forced to jump into the arena to help him; whereupon Senator Smoot promptly slipped out from under, and Reed has had to go ahead with the rumpus almost single-handed.

Senator Reed, in anything like a protective tariff fight, has the quality of boundless sincerity in common with Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut.

That is, they both are wholeheartedly and absolutely honestly convinced that most people are morons, with no idea how to take care of themselves and that plenty of special privileges ought to be granted to the very few whom nature has blessed with brains, in order to enable them to do their best by the bone-headed masses

Menu Hint

Meat Loaf Grilled Potatoes
Scalloped Onions and Carrots
Shredded Cabbage with French Dressing
Apple Tarts Coffee
or
Sliced Ham with Pineapple
Baked Sweet Potatoes
Celery Date Pudding
Whipped Cream
Coffee

These two menus are prepared in the oven. Neither menu would take more than an hour to bake and a little more than that to prepare. In preparing the first, the meat loaf should be made and put in to bake first, then the carrots and onions, then the apple tarts should be prepared, as they can be baked, while the first courses are being taken out and served. In the second one the date pudding had better be first, so that it may cool before serving.

Today's Recipes

Grilled Potatoes—Scrub and boil potatoes until almost tender. Cool, pare and slice one-fourth inch thick, lengthwise. Dot with melted butter or salad oil and cook on both sides under a broiler or in lower grill pan until brown. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Sweet potatoes may be cooked the same way.

Scalloped Carrots and Onions—Six medium-sized carrots, six good-sized onions, seasoning, butter, one cup milk, breadcrumbs. Slice the carrots and onions into a greased casserole in alternate layers, seasoning each layer with salt, pepper and butter. Pour the milk over the layers, cover with fine breadcrumbs and bake in a slow oven (250-300 degrees Fahrenheit) about three-quarters of an hour.

Date Souffle—One cup sugar, two eggs, one tablespoon flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one cup English walnuts, one cup dates, seeded and cut in half. Pour in a flat tin and bake 20 minutes in moderate oven. Serve cold with whipped cream.

Suggestions

Orange Salad, Serving Six
Eighteen slices of orange, one cup diced celery, six dates, seeded; one-half cup French dressing. Mix and chill the ingredients. Serve in cups of crisp lettuce.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

Pimples.

"DEAR DOCTOR: Although I possess a very clear skin, I am bothered with a continuous run of pimples on my face. I have done everything I know to cure them—dieting and all. My bowel action is normal; I have an hour's fresh air and walk two or three miles daily; eat large quantities of fresh vegetables, fruit and milk; little meat and few eggs; no eating between meals and no candy or rich foods of any kind; two glasses of cold water on arising. My height is 5 ft. 6 in., and my weight is 115.

"These pimples seem to run in the family. Might I inherit the tendency to them? It seems too unfair when I watch other girls eat all kinds of rich food—ice cream, sodas, etc., and I don't touch them. MRS. O."

You evidently have acne, Mrs. O. It is very common in young people, and stubborn to cure. While you think your diet is right, I suspect that is not quite sufficient, for if you are 5 ft. 6 in. tall and weight only 115 pounds, you are from 25 to 30 pounds underweight. This looks as though you are not eating enough, and any diet that is not correct in amount, or otherwise lowers the destroying powers of the blood and tissue fluids for any germs that may happen around. In other words, the resistance is lowered.

While your fresh fruits and vegetables would take care of your vitamins and mineral elements it is probable you are not getting enough energy foods, and it may be that you are not getting enough protein. In recent years the need of vitamins has been emphasized more than anything else, because they are the latest discovery in nutrition and are most apt to be deficient in the ordinary diet, but we mustn't forget that sufficient of the other elements are necessary also. If I were you, I would try to gain some weight and see what effect that would have.

You are right about omitting candy and rich foods, especially those rich in free fat (cream is not a free fat, but an emulsified fat), but you might eat more of the whole grain breads and cereals and perhaps take more vegetables and milk. Perhaps you need to rest more than you do.

About diseases "running" in families: We do know that the tendency towards certain diseases may be inherited, perhaps because the "pattern" of organs is inherited, and some types of organs are more susceptible to certain diseases than others. For instance, the long, narrow chest seems to be more susceptible to tuberculosis. But it does not follow, by any means, that these certain diseases must be acquired, for there are many other factors concerned in acquiring a disease, and these factors can largely be controlled.

Reasoning from this, it may be that you have inherited the pattern for large oil glands on your face. These glands have an over-secretion of sebum or skin oil which sometimes hardens in the pores and forms blackheads or comedones. The beginning of the acne pimples are always in these blackheads, so part of the treatment of acne is their prevention and removal after formation. This may be accomplished by a thorough washing twice a day with some mild toilet soap and hot water, then wiping the affected areas with some antiseptic solution such as peroxide of hydrogen, diluted half and half with water, or a solution of alcohol or bay rum or toilet water; then the extraction of the blackheads. This is best done with what is known as a comedone extractor. Follow this again with antiseptic solution. This I would follow with a little glycerine solution—one part of glycerine to four of water.

For further directions for home treatment, will you send for our article on Acne? If the home treatment isn't effective, you should see a skin specialist, Mrs. O.

XENIA FROSH LEADS QUAKER OFFENSE IN 33 TO 14 WIN FRIDAY

Scores Five Times; Boxwell on Bench With Leg Injury

LED by Fred "Bulldog" Smith, Xenia's flashy freshman halfback, whose spectacular running accounted for all of his team's five touchdowns, Xenia triumphed over Cedarville College 33 to 14 in a return football game at Cedarville Friday afternoon.

Wilmington was without the services of its ball-carrying ace, Paul "Pop" Boxwell, Xenia fullback, who is laid up with an injury, but his absence did not handicap the Quaker offense Friday inasmuch as Smith ran wild. The Xenia freshman crossed the Cedarville goal line five times, once in the first, third and fourth quarters and twice in the second period.

"Bulldog" registered thirty points single-handed for the Quakers and, strangely enough, two points for Cedarville in the third quarter. Stormont, Cedarville center, broke through the line and tackled Smith behind the goal line for a safety, giving the Borlinsmen two points.

Cedarville's pair of touchdowns came in the second and fourth quarters. Halfback Turner scored the first marker on a ten-yard run around end and the second touchdown was in the final period when Fullback Irons plunged over for the counter after Stormont had blocked and then recovered a Wilmington punt on the one-yard line.

Smith's broken field running, however, was a revelation. His runs varied from fifteen to forty-five yards but his longest run of the afternoon was a sixty-yard return of a punt for a touchdown.

Friday's tilt was the final game of the season for Cedarville, which closed its schedule without a victory, although earlier in the season the "Yellow-Jackets" had held Wilmington to a scoreless tie. In the light of this early showing against the Quakers, the score of the return game Friday was something of a surprise.

Cedarville's dreams of a victory over Wilmington after eleven years of Quaker athletic supremacy therefore proved a mirage. Four members of the Cedarville team played their last collegiate football game Friday as they are seniors. Stormont, center; Gordon, guard; Kenney, end, and Marshall, tackle, will graduate next June but in their final appearance in a Cedarville uniform they gave a fine account of themselves, particularly Stormont, who ended his football career in a blaze of glory.

One distinction was held by Cedarville Friday, however. Fourteen points is the most ever scored by a Cedarville football team against a Wilmington eleven. Summary: Wilmington (33) Cedarville (14). Weimer 100 yds. Peters 100 yds. W. Boyer 100 yds. Lander 100 yds. Gordon 100 yds. Stormont 100 yds. Kenfield 100 yds. Oshorn 100 yds. Hines 100 yds. Kenney 100 yds. Barrack 100 yds. Townsley 100 yds. Smith 100 yds. Smith 100 yds. Davis 100 yds. Turner 100 yds. Kinzig 100 yds. Irons 100 yds.

ALL VACANT BIG LEAGUE MANAGERIAL BERTHS FILLED

NEW YORK AND GEORGIA ENGAGE IN INTERSECTIONAL BATTLE

By DAVIS J. WALSH, N. Y. Sports Editor. NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—New York University and Georgia, representative teams of the north and south will settle the prosaic matter of a football game this afternoon before a crowd of 40,000, with Dave Myer, the colored quarterback, out of action. He underwent a physical examination yesterday, and it was declared afterward that an injury to his shoulder, sustained in a recent game, had rendered him physically unfit for play. A left-hand passer, his left shoulder, they say, is so badly damaged that he cannot lift his arm. Thus, the final word of controversy that agitated the newspapers but left both colleges serenely undisturbed.

His loss to N. Y. U. was important but not necessarily fatal. One "Jinx" O'Herrin, a regular last year but not so highly esteemed in 1929, will play quarterback, the position he occupied during the Fordham disaster. This was one of two defeats N. Y. U. sustained this year, the other having been absorbed in the Georgetown meeting last week.

In consequence, a pair of 1928 winners but 1929 losers will be coupled in the betting today. Georgia, one of the great inconsistencies of the present campaign, beat what turned out to be a remarkable Yale team, by 15 to 0, but lost to Oglethorpe, Florida and Tulane. Meantime, it was too good for North Carolina and all too few of them get that way. In fact, the Georgia defeats were the only ones scored against Yale and North Carolina this season.

The outfit is handled by Harry Mehre, Notre Dame man, and features the speed and versatility of the Rockne attack. However, sometimes it is an attack, sometimes it isn't. Georgia has been unfortunate this season in that it is forced to operate with inexperienced guards in the running attack, the 1928 regulars having been graduated. Its best ball-runners are Waugh, Moran and Downes but the latter may not start because of injuries.

It was anybody's ball game because of the uncertainty of the teams involved. N. Y. U. thought it had quite a tackle in Grant, quite a ball-runner in Follett and quite a plunger in La Mark before the season started. But Grant and Follett, prospective All Americans, blew themselves to a bad year while La Mark is only beginning to come as a player of the first rank.

Today's game, therefore, will furnish a great divide for both teams. For the winner, it will mean a season of moderate success and, for the loser, immoderate failure.

At Champaign, Ill., West Point's cadets and the University of Illinois are engaged in one of the most colorful battles in the West this season. James W. Good, secretary of war, will sit with Gov. Louis Emmerson in one of the boxes of Memorial Stadium.

High army officers will contribute their part to the occasion as Capt. Christian Cagle's squad attempts to reverse the Illinois and their western style of football. Sixty-eight thousand persons will witness the battle.

At Ann Arbor, Mich., Harvard engages the Michigan team before some 85,000 partisans or more. This is the first time the two teams have met since 1914 when Harvard won, 7 to 0.

Out at Iowa City, Ia., the most crucial conference battle of the day is to take place with Iowa intent on smashing the titleward march of Minnesota's husky bonecrushers. Iowa has been tripped up by Ohio State and tied by Illinois, but Minnesota has a clean slate of victories.

Northwestern, still holding an outside chance of coming up among the leaders at the close of the season, is fighting it out with the undefeated Ohio State aggregation at Columbus, O. After sending Illinois home last week under the cloud of defeat Northwestern is regarded as having hit its pace and may cause serious trouble for Ohio.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—President and Mrs. Hoover will leave the White House today to attend the football game between the Navy and Georgetown University, on Farragut Field, at Annapolis. A month ago the presidential couple journeyed to Philadelphia to see the windup of the baseball championship series.

The presidential party is scheduled to be received by Real-Admiral Robison, superintendent of the naval academy, at 2 p. m. and after a brief pause will depart for their boxes.

A salute of twenty-one guns from a battleship in the Severn River, will greet the president as he enters upon the naval reservation.

Immediately after the game the party will return by motor to the capital.

Included in the party will be—Assistant Secretary of the Navy Jahnke, whose son is a midshipman, the three presidential secretaries, Lawrence Richey, George Akerson and Walter Newton, and Mrs. Newton and Mrs. Richey, the presidential aide, Alan Buchanan, the presidential military aide, Col. Campbell Hodges, and Commander Joel T. Boone, the president's personal physician.

PROPOSED HIGHWAY BOOSTED AT BLANCHESTER HEARING

More than 1,500 people from Greene, Clinton, Clermont and Warren Counties, who attended a public hearing held in the high school auditorium at Blanchester Friday afternoon in connection with the movement to have the famous Bullskin-Xenia trail improved and included in the state highway system, received the encouraging assurance of state highway officials that the project will probably be approved.

Governor Myers V. Cooper and Robert Wald, state highway director, were unable to attend the highway demonstration, but Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown was present and the meeting was featured by a large number of brief talks favoring the plan, given by representative citizens of the four counties which would be benefited by improvement of the historic trail.

Among those who gave brief talks in favor of the improvement were: Herman Eavey, president of the board of Greene County Commissioners; Representative R. D. Williamson, Greene County; former State Senator L. T. Marshall, Xenia; Dr. W. A. Galloway, Xenia; historian of the Bullskin-Xenia State Highway Association; E. R. Hayes, representing the Wilmington Auto Club; Earl Carter, president of the Clermont County Trustees Association; R. P. Vandam, Warren County; and G. M. Roubush, New- tonville, O.; A. D. Hosterman, Springfield, chairman of the Ohio Memorial Commission; John Hay, famous Bullskin-Xenia trail improved and included in the state highway system, received the encouraging assurance of state highway officials that the project will probably be approved.

Gree County at the meeting also included: all members of the board of county commissioners; Prof. H. C. Aultman, president of the highway association, who presided at the session; Mr. and Mrs. Lyon Galloway, Mrs. Alice Eavey; Mrs. Aultman and Harry E. Clark; Dallas Sullivan, chairman of the highway committee of the House of Representatives, was also present and addressed the assembly. One of the most popular talks was that of Miss H. Anna Quinby, Columbus attorney, secretary-treasurer of the highway association, who closed the arguments in favor of the highway.

After arguments in favor of the highway had been completed, Roy Miller, Lebanon, division highway engineer, took charge of the meeting and introduced several other state highway officials.

In the evening most of the Greene County delegates and many other guests of the Blanchester Chamber of Commerce at a banquet at a hotel in which the proposed highway again was the topic for discussion in several informal talks.

The show is sponsored by Ohio Beta Beta Chapter, Phi Delta Kappa Fraternity. The public is urged to buy tickets early as there are many choice seats left for each night.

The Cosmopolitan Band of Antioch College will furnish music during the show with Prof. H. E. Seal as leader. Jerry Ball, well known pianist, will play piano numbers between acts. The first act is laid backstage in the Palace Theatre in New York City with "Mr. Tip", portrayed by Elwood Smith, and "Mr. Top", played by William Horner, having their wiles over the staging of the "Tip-Top Revue".

Arthur Hyman takes the part of the stage director, who is upset over the complaints of several of the actors and actresses, and Glenn Mcadden, "Hank", supplies the comedy in the scene aided by Miss Helen LeSourd, Bud McPherson and Miss Mildred Mason.

The second act is the "Tip-Top Revue" itself in twenty scenes, featuring many specialties, comedy scenes and latest song hits, new dance steps and novelties.

Robert Owens is author and director of the revue.

COMEDY-DRAMA OPENS GUILD SEASON. The Xenia Little Theater Guild opened its season at the City Hall Theatre Friday night when it presented the comedy-drama "Tea For Three" before a fair-sized audience.

Leading parts were capably taken by Miss Margaret Little, Attorney Marcus McCallister, and Fred T. Flynn, who were the wife, husband and "other man," respectively, in the marital triangle presented.

Minor roles of butler, maid and valet were taken by John Wood, Helen Spahr and Robert Ellis. Miss Little and Mr. Flynn made their first stage appearance in a Guild play at Friday night's performance, but Mr. McCallister is an old favorite having taken part in Guild presentations last season.

The play was directed by Mrs. Esther Smith Schick. Special musical numbers presented during the play were greatly enjoyed. Miss Eleanor McDonnell, winner of the Atwater Kent radio audition for southwestern Ohio sang three numbers, accompanied on the piano by her sister, Miss Mary McDonnell. Three violin numbers were played by Mrs. Louis Hammerle. Her accompanist was Miss Marjorie Street.

When notified of his good luck "Mel" merely started at once to go deer hunting, as the season opened in southern Maine the next day. He's an enthusiastic sportsman, is "Mel," and couldn't have his hunting trip interrupted for a little thing like collecting $79,339.50.

He's waiting for the money calmly, as if it were a matter of some good customer paying a bill the first of the month. In fact, he seems far less excited than the 16,000 persons of Springfield and the parent town of Sanford.

What a Name to Pick! It was a nag named Double Life which romped home with "Mel's" buck on his nose to convert the lone singleton into a tidy little fortune. A rather significant cognomen in view of the trick Double Life turned. "Mel" bought a ticket, as did two clerks in his store, and tucked it away in his pocket without giving his nth to one shot any more thought. He just had a "hoss," that's all. Then five days later he got a wire from the Canadian office of the sweepstakes informing him that his "hoss" had collected.

And there you are. Some guys have all the luck.

What to Do With It? How he will invest his filthy lucre "Mel" hasn't decided, although he admits he'll have plenty of use for it, with three husky and hungry children growing up.

By Central Press. SPRINGVALE, Me., Nov. 9.—Seventy-nine thousand three hundred and thirty-nine dollars and fifty cents! All in one lump and all for the investment of one dollar!

"Whew! That's a lot of coin," opined James Melvin Westcott, grocer of Springvale, when notified that he had cleaned up on the Army and Navy Veterans' Sweepstakes at the Cambridge races, Newmarket, England.

And "Mel," as his customers know him in the little Maine town where he has lived twenty-seven years since he moved there with his parents when a small boy from Lowell, Mass., is firmly of the mind that the stock market will see none of the seventy-nine thousand. Dabbling in stocks, "Mel" believes, is even more hazardous than playing the ponies. He's met Lady Luck and isn't going to exasperate the stranger.

Xenia Central High's football rivalry with its rival of longest standing, Wilmington, will be renewed next Friday afternoon at Cox Athletic Field in the twenty-first game between these two schools since 1911. This ancient rivalry undoubtedly extends back considerably farther but figures before that year are not available, at least to this demon statistician.

Over a period of eighteen years Xenia teams have won ten of the twenty games played, Wilmington has been victorious in eight contests and two tie games were played. Although the Bucs have a wo-game edge in the matter of victories, Quaker teams have outscored Xenia eleven, Wilmington's point total is 260 against 245 for Xenia.

Incidentally, Wilmington has not beaten Xenia on the gridiron since 1925, the Bucs having won the last three games played. The Xenia-Vilmington football feud is almost broken one with the exception that the two schools did not meet in football in 1913, 1919 and 1922. Since 1923 annual games have been played. In the early stages of the rivalry it often happened that two games were played each season. There are five instances of home-and-home games since 1911.

Without getting all worked up into a lather about who is going to win Friday's contest, we will discuss that subject temporarily with the observation that Xenia has at least a chance to win.

Here is a list of Xenia-Wilmington football scores since 1911:

1911—Xenia 18, Wilmington 3.
1912—Xenia 25, Wilmington 0.
1913—Xenia 0, Wilmington 62.
1914—Xenia 6, Wilmington 0.
1915—Xenia 27, Wilmington 7.
1916—Xenia 20, Wilmington 20.
1917—Xenia 0, Wilmington 21.
1918—Xenia 0, Wilmington 28.
1919—Xenia 6, Wilmington 33.
1920—Xenia 39, Wilmington 0.
1921—Xenia 0, Wilmington 29.
1922—Xenia 7, Wilmington 0.
1923—Xenia 10, Wilmington 6.
1924—Xenia 0, Wilmington 7.
1925—Xenia 0, Wilmington 6.
1926—Xenia 7, Wilmington 0.
1927—Xenia 20, Wilmington 9.
1928—Xenia 20, Wilmington 6.
1929—Xenia 7, Wilmington 7.

It seems that there has been a light miscarriage of justice some-where for the mail brings a letter from Bob Adair, former Xenia Central High School football star, now fresh at the University of Wisconsin, giving recognition where recognition is due in the matter of the new bleachers under construction at Cox Athletic Field. Bob was so high school correspondent for the Gazette. Says Bob:

"Read an article of yours about the erection of the new bleachers at Cox Field. In the story you reported that the memorial fund of $8 was available. However, I don't think that such is the case. Instead, is the memorial fund of the class of 1929 which is being used. This fund was laid away by '29 for the specific purpose of erecting stands. 'The last time I talked with school officials they assured me that '29 would receive credit for augmenting the fund and that a statement to that effect would go down on record."

"If possible, Phil, I wish you could give us an inch or two on it, for we feel that we deserve it, especially since the whole affair originated in our class. Our class will certainly appreciate it."

Bob also observes that Xenia Central and Wisconsin have something in common when it comes to football.

"While in the region of football it looks like Wisconsin and Xenia are in the same boat. Bloomy Glen's charges don't seem to be able to get into the column in spite of the fact that they are playing some good football."

"Despite what appears to be a bad showing, I believe that in an arena of the strongest defensive full-backs playing this season, I think he is a winning team. I think he is a little doubtful that he would be 'All-American.'"

LD GRID RIVALRY WILL BE RESUMED

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—Pennsylvania and Penn State will renew their long hostility on the gridiron here today before a crowd some sixty thousand.

Penn leads in the long series that started in 1890 with twenty-one victories, against seven defeats and one tie.

Providing the field is dry, both teams are expected to resort to a hard passing attack. In French, French and Evans, State has a veritable trio of throwers while the major portion of Penn's air attack will be taken care of by Masters and Wilner.

XENIA FROSH LEADS QUAKER OFFENSE IN 33 TO 14 WIN FRIDAY

Scores Five Times; Boxwell On Bench With Leg Injury

LED by Fred "Bulldog" Smith, Xenia, flashy freshman half-back, whose spectacular running accounted for all of his team's five touchdowns, Wilmington College triumphed over Cedarville College 33 to 14 in a return football game at Cedarville Friday afternoon.

Wilmington was without the services of its ball-carrying ace, Paul "Pop" Boxwell, Xenia fullback, who is laid up with an injury, but his absence did not handicap the Quaker offense Friday inasmuch as Smith ran wild. The Xenia freshman crossed the Cedarville goal line five times, once in the first, third and fourth quarters and twice in the second period.

"Bulldog" registered thirty points single-handed for the Quakers and also, strangely enough, two points for Cedarville. In the third quarter Stormont, Cedarville center, broke through the line and tackled Smith behind the goal line for a safety, giving the Borstmen two points.

Cedarville's pair of touchdowns came in the second and fourth quarters. Halfback Turner scored the first marker on a ten-yard run around end and the second touchdown was in the final period when Fullback Irons plunged over for the counter after Stormont had blocked and then recovered a Wilmington punt on the one-yard line.

Smith's broken field running, however, was a revelation. His runs varied from fifteen to forty-five yards but his longest run of the afternoon was a sixty-yard return of a punt for a touchdown.

Friday's tilt was the final game of the season for Cedarville, which closed its schedule without a victory, although earlier in the season the "Yellow-Jackets" had held Wilmington to a scoreless tie. In the light of this early showing against the Quakers the score of the return game Friday was something of a surprise.

Cedarville's dreams of a victory over Wilmington after eleven years of Quaker athletic supremacy therefore proved a mirage.

Four members of the Cedarville team played their last collegiate football game Friday as they are seniors, Stormont, center; Gordon, guard; Kenney, end, and Marshall, tackle, will graduate next June but in their final appearance in a Cedarville uniform they gave a fine account of themselves, particularly Stormont, who ended his football career in a blaze of glory.

One distinction was held by Cedarville Friday, however. Fourteen points is the most ever scored by a Cedarville football team against a Wilmington eleven. Summary:

Wilmington (33) Cedarville (14)

Wilmington: 1st quarter, Peters 10, 2nd quarter, W. Boyer 10, 3rd quarter, Gordon 10, 4th quarter, Stormont 10. Cedarville: 1st quarter, Marshall 10, 2nd quarter, Kenney 10, 3rd quarter, Smith 10, 4th quarter, Turner 10.

Score by periods:

Wilmington 6 14 7 6—33
Cedarville 0 6 2 6—14

Wilmington scoring: touchdowns—Smith 5; points after touchdowns—Kinzig 2; D. Davis. Cedarville scoring: touchdowns—Turner, Irons; safety by Smith of Wilmington.

Officials—Chambers, Cincinnati, referee; Garrett, Centre; umpire, Turnbull, Marietta, headlinesman.

DELICIOUS DESSERTS ARE DISCUSSED BY NUTRITION LEADERS

Mrs. E. A. Drake, wife of the county agricultural agent, opened her home Friday for the first meeting of township nutrition leaders, who are taking the course in "Attractive Desserts," under the leadership of Mr. Drake, co-operating with the home economics extension service of Ohio State University.

Miss Emma C. Sparks, nutrition specialist of the university extension service met the two leaders from each township and demonstrated and discussed with them the making of simple and inexpensive sweets. These leaders will pass the information on to local leaders, who will in turn hold neighborhood meetings. County Agent Drake says that any woman interested in obtaining the help in the extension service, should get in touch with himself or one of the leaders.

The following township leaders attended the meeting at the Drake home:

Cedarville, Mrs. David Bradfute and Mrs. E. E. Finney;
Ross, Mrs. F. O. Lillick and Mrs. Ray Reid;
Beaver Creek, Mrs. Horace Ferguson and Mrs. Lawrence Manor;
Xenia, Mrs. J. W. Ray, Mrs. John Harner and Mrs. Clarence Baynard;
New Jasper, Mrs. A. D. Thomas, Mrs. Henry Jones and Mrs. George Bootes;
Silvercreek, Mrs. Chas. Leach and Mrs. C. B. Smith;
Cassara, Mrs. R. K. Haines and Mrs. Kate Ruddick;
Jefferson, Mrs. Howard Smith and Mrs. K. M. Johnston.

NEW YORK AND GEORGIA ENGAGE IN INTERSECTIONAL BATTLE

By DAVIS J. WALSH
N. Y. Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—New York University and Georgia, representative teams of the north and south will settle the prosaic matter of a football game this afternoon before a crowd of 40,000, with Dave Myers, the colored quarterback, out of action. He underwent a physical examination yesterday, and it was declared afterward that an injury to his shoulder, sustained in a recent game, had rendered him physically unfit for play. In consequence, a pair of 1928 winners but 1929 losers will be coupled in the betting today. Georgia, one of the great inconsistencies of the present campaign, beat what turned out to be a remarkable Yale team, by 15 to 0, but lost to Georgetown, Florida and Tulane. Meantime, it was too good for North Carolina and all too few of them got that way. In fact, the Georgia defeats were the only ones scored against Yale and North Carolina this season.

The outfit is handled by Harry Mehre, Notre Dame man, and features the speed and versatility of the Rockne attack. However, sometimes it is an attack, sometimes it isn't. Georgia has been unfortunate this season in that it is forced to operate with inexperienced guards in the running attack, the 1928 regulars having been graduated. Its best ball-runners are Vaughn, Moran and Downes but the latter may not start because of injuries.

It was anybody's ball game because of the uncertainty of the teams involved. N. Y. U. thought it had quite a tackle in Grant, quite a ball-runner in Follett and quite a plunger in La Mark before the season started. But Grant and Follett, prospective All Americans, blew themselves to a bad year while La Mark is only beginning to come as a player of the first rank.

Today's game, therefore, will furnish a great divide for both teams. For the winner, it will mean a season of moderate success and, for the loser, immoderate failure.

ARMY AND ILLINOIS CONTEST AT URBANA ATTRACTS INTEREST

Harvard-Michigan Is Expected To Draw 85,000

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Pageantry of two great intersectional gridiron battles competed with the more serious business of wrecking title hopes in the Western Conference today.

At Champaign, Ill., West Point's cadets and the University of Illinois are engaged in one of the most colorful battles in the West this season. James W. Good, secretary of war, will sit with Gov. Louis Emmerson in one of the boxes of Memorial Stadium.

High army officers will contribute their part to the occasion as Capt. Christian Cagle's squad attempts to reverse the Illinois and their western style of football. Sixty-eight thousand persons will witness the battle.

At Ann Arbor, Mich., Harvard engages the Michigan team before some 85,000 partisans or more. This is the first time the two teams have met since 1914 when Harvard won, 7 to 0.

Out at Iowa City, Ia., the most crucial conference battle of the day is to take place with Iowa intent on smashing the title-ward march of Minnesota's husky bone-crushers. Iowa has been tripped up by Ohio State and tied by Illinois, but Minnesota has a clean slate of victories.

Northwestern, still holding an outside chance of coming up among the leaders at the close of the season, is fighting it out with the undefeated Ohio State aggregation at Columbus, O. After sending Illinois home last week under the cloud of defeat Northwestern is regarded as having hit its pace and may cause serious trouble for Ohio.

Chicago and Wisconsin are merely settling a traditional grievance here today, for both are out of the race.

Purdue, regarded as having an even chance with Minnesota for the title by sending up conference opponents this week for the invading Mississippi team.

ASHLAND ENTERS GAME CRIPPLED

ASHLAND, O., Nov. 9.—Ashland College's hope for a victory over The College of Pennsylvania on the gridiron this afternoon today had been dampened by the injury of Rob Riley, star halfback.

Riley was hurt yesterday during a light scrimmage when he collided with another Ashland player. The injury may keep him out of the starting lineup today.

PROPOSED HIGHWAY BOOSTED AT BLANCHESTER HEARING

More than 1,500 people from Greene, Clinton, Clermont and Warren Counties, who attended a public hearing held in the high school auditorium at Blanchester Friday afternoon in connection with the movement to have the famous Bullskin-Xenia trail improved and included in the state's highway system, received the encouraging assurance of state highway officials that the project will probably be approved.

Governor Myers V. Cooper and Robert Wald, state highway director, were unable to attend the highway demonstration, but Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown was present and the meeting was featured by a large number of brief talks favoring the plan, given by representative citizens of the four counties which would be benefited by improvement of the historic trail.

Among those who gave brief talks in favor of the improvement were: Herman Eavey, president of the board of Greene County Commissioners; Representative R. D. Williamson, Greene County; former State Senator L. T. Marshall, Xenia; Dr. W. A. Galloway, Xenia, historian of the Bullskin-Xenia State Highway Association; E. R. Hayes, representing the Wilmington Auto Club; Earl Canter, president of the Clermont County Trustees Association; B. P. Vandament, former representative of Clermont County; G. M. Roubush, New-Tonville, O.; A. D. Hosterman, Springfield, chairman of the Ohio Memorial Commission; John Hayden of Clermont County; Arthur Hamilton, of Warren County; Floyd Temple, of Clinton County; State Senator M. S. Kunz, Montgomery County; Mrs. Tella Doughman, Blanchester, G. A. R. representative, and Miss Sullivan, of the Cincinnati Auto Club.

Greene Countians at the meeting also included: all members of the board of county commissioners; Prof. H. C. Aultman, president of the highway association, who presided at the session; Mr. and Mrs. Lyon Galloway, Mrs. Alice Eavey; Mrs. Aultman and Harry E. Clark. Dallas Sullivan, chairman of the highway committee of the House of Representatives, was also present and addressed the assembly. One of the most popular talks was that of Miss H. Anna Quinby, Columbus attorney, secretary-treasurer of the highway association, who closed the arguments in favor of the highway.

Among others present was William Blanchard, after whose grandfather Blanchester was named.

After arguments in favor of the highway had been completed, Roy Miller, Lebanon, division highway engineer, took charge of the meeting and introduced several other state highway officials.

In the evening most of the Greene County delegates and many others were guests of the Blanchester Chamber of Commerce at a banquet at a hotel in which the proposed highway again was the topic for discussion in several informal talks.

HOOVER TO ATTEND NAVY-GEORGETOWN GAME AT ANNAPOLIS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—President and Mrs. Hoover will leave the White House today to attend the football game between the navy middies, and the gridders of Georgetown University, on Farragut Field, at Annapolis. A month ago the presidential couple journeyed to Philadelphia to see the windup of the baseball championship series.

The presidential party is scheduled to be received by Rear-Admiral Robison, superintendent of the naval academy, at 2 p. m., and after a brief pause will depart for their boxes.

A salute of twenty-one guns from a battleship in the Severn River, will greet the president as he enters upon the naval reservation.

Immediately after the game the party will return by motor to the capital.

Included in the party will be—Assistant Secretary of the Navy John H. Hines, who is a midshipman, the three presidential secretaries, Lawrence Richey, George Akerson and Walter Newton, and Mrs. Newton and Mrs. Richey, the presidential aide, Alan Buchanan, the presidential military aide, Col. Campbell Hodges, and Commander Joel T. Boone, the president's personal physician.

MOTHER DIES

Mrs. Jacobs passed away at 4 o'clock Friday evening after an illness of some time. Funeral services have not been completed.

MAN WINS $79,339.50 FROM DOLLAR INVESTMENT IN RACE

Mr. and Mrs. J. Melvin Westcott and their three children: Glenna, 7; Haskell, 5, and Nathalie, 3.

By Central Press

SPRINGVALE, Me., Nov. 9.—Seventy-nine thousand three hundred and thirty-nine dollars and fifty cents! All in one lump and all for the investment of one dollar!

"Whew! That's a lot of coin," opined James Melvin Westcott, grocer of Springvale, when notified that he had cleaned up the Army and Navy Veterans' Sweepstakes at the Cambridgehire races, Newmarket, England.

And "Mel," as his customers know him to the little Maine town where he has lived twenty-seven years since he moved there with his parents from a small boy from Lowell, Mass., is firmly of the mind that the stock market will see none of the seventy-nine thousand, dubbing in stocks, "Mel" believes, is even more hazardous than playing the ponies. He's met Lady Luck and isn't going to exasperate the stranger.

What to Do With It?

How he will invest his filthy lucre "Mel" hasn't decided, although he admits he'll have plenty of use for it with three husky and hungry children growing up.

When notified of his good luck "Mel" merely started at once to go deer hunting, as the season opened in southern Maine the next day. He's an enthusiastic sportsman, is "Mel," and couldn't have his hunting trip interrupted for a little thing like collecting $79,000.

He's waiting for the money calmly, as if it were a matter of some good customer paying a bill the first of the month. In fact, he seems far less excited than the 16,000 persons of Springvale and the parent town of Sanford.

What a Name to Pick!

It was a nag named Double Life which romped home with "Mel's" luck on his nose to convert the lone simoleon into a tidy little fortune. A rather significant coincidence in view of the trick Double Life turned "Mel" bought a ticket, as did two clerks in his store, and tucked it away in his pocket without giving his nth to one shot any more thought. He just had a "hoss," that's all. Then five days later he got a wire from the Canadian office of the sweepstakes informing him that his "hoss" had collected.

And there you are. Some guys have all the luck.

COMEDY-DRAMA OPENS GUILD SEASON

The Xenia Little Theater Guild opened its season at the City Hall Theater Friday night when it presented the comedy-drama "Tea For Three" before a fair-sized audience.

Leading parts were capably taken by Miss Margaret Little, Attorney Marcus McCallister, and Fred T. Flynn, who were the wife, husband and "other man," respectively, in the marital triangle presented.

Minor roles of butler, maid and valet were taken by John Wood, Helen Spahr and Robert Ellis. Miss Little and Mr. Flynn made their first stage appearance in a Guild play at Friday night's performance, but Mr. McCallister is an old favorite having taken part in Guild presentations last season.

The play was directed by Mrs. Esther Smith Schick.

Special musical numbers presented between acts were greatly enjoyed. Miss Eleanor McDonnell, winner of the Atwater Kent radio audition for southwestern Ohio sang three numbers, accompanied on the piano by her sister, Miss Mary McDonnell. Three violin numbers were played by Mrs. Louis Hammerle. Her accompanist was Miss Marjorie Street.

READ THIS FIRST:

Rosalie March, seventeen, after the death of her mother, secures a position at the hosiery counter in a Philadelphia store through the kindness of Kenessa Du Barry, an actress. She is adored by her landlady, Mother Murphy, and little Tim O'Hara, corner newsboy. Her first day at the store she wears a pair of cotton stockings because she finds a "run" in her old pair of silk ones. After the girls at the store make fun of her, Rosalie, in desperation, takes a pair of silk stockings from the stock, promising herself to make good for them pay day. In her confusion, leaving the store, she drops the hose, and is observed by Alberto Martino, the store detective, who does not detain her, but says he will see her later.

Roy Clarke Andrews, nephew of the store owner, notices Rosalie and chats with her daily. Rosalie has a boy friend, Neil McKinley, back home, but they quarreled when she left for the city. Neil calls Rosalie unexpectedly one evening. They dine, and Neil drinks too much. Stepping down the street, they are stopped by a motor policeman, who arrests them. Neil is detained, but Rosalie is sent home. Martino, threatening arrest for taking the stockings, makes Rosalie promise to hide a suitcase in her room.

Rosalie has a date with Roy Andrews. A man representing Martino brings more suitcases to hide in her room, and Rosalie is frightened.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVIII

Rosalie was thoroughly alarmed by this time.

She took care of her own room. But suppose Mother Murphy should see them and question her. What could she possibly tell her?

So certain by this time that she was in deep danger she was panty with the idea of trying to free herself—or of someone finding out. What would Martino and the stranger do to her?

She determined to talk with Martino. She must find out that day when he passed the counter and Ann was away, she called to him. Because she dared call his name out in the store he crossed to her angrily.

"Well, sister, what's on your mind?"

She tried to keep her face natural so that the other people in the store would not notice her fear.

"I want to know what is in the suit case the man has brought to me. I'm afraid."

His jaw set and his eyes were the coldest and most sinister she had ever seen.

"Beginnin' to ask questions, eh? Won't even trust me after I save you from the house go?"

But he realized he must be careful in the store, so his manner changed.

"It's just a little private affair, sister. It ain't got to explode, and you ain't got to get into no trouble. Keep your eyes and ears and your mouth shut and forget it."

He strode away importantly.

A few minutes later Roy Andrews came to her again.

"What! Another sorrow to drown? You look as though it might take a steak this time! I've just lost a wife and seven children at sea myself, and I feel the same way. Shall we try another country resort?"

"I'd love it!" The "dimple in her chin struggled into play. "I feel as though I had just tipped the boat that drowned your poor wife and seven kids at sea."

"We'll get real gosh-heckish and see a musical comedy. How's 'at?"

She had never seen anything but a cheap movie. It would be thrilling!

They ate in a little place in the country called "The Daffodil." It was all yellow and shiny with large yellow and white checked table cloths on the tables and daffodils smiling in the middle.

He did not have a high ball this time. She was glad. But didn't know it was because she felt it might be unpleasant for her to sit beside him in the theater if she didn't like it. Roy Andrews always had liquor with his meals. But he was not a souse. No one had ever seen him really intoxicated except two or three times at fraternity affairs in college.

When the girls of "Heigh-Ho the Merry-Oh" danced out on the stage twenty of them in little bits of handkerchief costumes, Rosalie sat tight in her seat and tried not to feel ashamed. It was the first time she had ever imagined being with a man and seeing such a performance.

In a few minutes her feeling of embarrassment had completely passed away and she was star-eyed and breathless with the beauty and cleverness of the dancers. Why

His people all went to church, too. But it was a church that did not disapprove of recreation and moderate use of the things she had been taught to believe were so sinful.

Rosalie was in deep thought while he talked. He must be telling the truth. For he talked like a father and seemed so nice and kind himself. Maybe her mother had been wrong.

She was swept with memories. Her mother. The dark shadows hanging over her. Neil's mother's letter. Roy seemed so near and so good as he talked and explained to her that, suddenly she felt the tears on her face again as she had the night before her graduation—and again the strange longing ache in her heart.

The moon was almost as bright as day. When he stopped talking and looked at her he saw the tears. In a moment he had drawn the car up beside the road and taken her in his arms.

"Why, honey, I've hurt you—"

"Oh, no," she denied, and felt like a little girl in his great, protecting arms—"it's not that."

He held her closely and her lip trembled.

"I've been so lonely—and it's all so new and so different."

He kissed the tears from her eyes. And before either of them realized what had happened his lips were crushed to hers and she was clinging around his neck.

A picture of Neil passed before her—but she did not care. Neil's kisses! Why was this so different?

And what was the flame-like sudden fire, that sped from his lips through hers so she felt as if never could she let him go?

SCOUT COMMITTEE LAYS PLANS FOR ACHIEVEMENT ROUND UP

Plans for the first "Achievement Round-Up" to be sponsored by the Cincinnati Council, Boy Scouts of America, were outlined at the business session of a dinner-meeting of the Greene County District Scout Committee held at the Frances Inn Friday evening.

A nominating committee composed of Purl Cox, chairman, H. E. Eichman and A. V. Miller was appointed to report at the next committee meeting which will be held the first Monday in December.

Carl Mellage told the committee that in a report sent out from the regional office, the Tecumseh Council ranks among the three leading Boy Scout councils in Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia.

Every troop in Greene County does its part by achieving, the local council could be the outstanding one in this region," Mellage declared.

In order to stimulate interest in the proposed round-up, the following committee was appointed to Greene County: Schuyler McCallan, chairman; Purl Cox, representing Troop No. 41; Dr. R. I. Halnes, for Jamestown; Fred A. Lang, for Troop 43; Carl Mellage, for Troop 45; Wilbur Buffenberger, for Fairfield; Arthur T. C. Haydock, for Troop 49; Dr. C. E.

The Theater

Sale of seats for the "Tip Top Revue," a musical show to be given by Ohio Beta Beta Chapter, Phi Delta Kappa Fraternity next Wednesday and Thursday at City Hall Theaters indicates that this form of entertainment still has a strong appeal for Xenia audiences.

The lure of seeing people you know perform on the stage apparently runs strong in the human breast. For years the old popular Elks' Minstrels, annually at Thanksgiving time, brought forth huge crowds to see their favorites clown in blackface.

After the minstrel died out as a local attraction, the late Gleason McCarthy, Columbus director, introduced musical comedy as a home-talent vehicle, and this form recently gave away to the revue type of show, rather an ambitious undertaking for amateurs.

McCarthy made his debut here by directing an operetta and his finale by producing a minstrel show. Musical comedy was his delight and he wrote his own books and many of his own songs.

Ray Lee Jackson, another prominent Columbus director, produced one musical comedy here following on McCarthy's heels, and after that the professional directors held away for a time, the John B. Rogers Co., the Wayne B. Sewell Co., and others, having produced a number of the amateur shows here several years ago.

Bob Owens wrote the book for "Tip Top Revue," and is doing the directing as well, and the production so far, is said to indicate considerable talent in his direction. It is not his first effort, as he has written and produced several revues of similar nature with local talent and for local audiences during the last few years. The coming revue uses a vast amount of local talent, with some star performers imported from Jamestown, and is said to be quite an elaborate and pretentious offering for a home-talent undertaking.

People who have tired of the "Mammy" song had best sell their radios and stop-up their ears, because cause Irving Berlin and Al Jolson are at it again.

In the first place Warner Bros. are going to make a talkie picture called "Mammy" featuring Al Jolson and Berlin has agreed to write a new mammy song as a theme piece. In addition, of course, Jolson will sing half a dozen other Berlin numbers.

The supporting cast will include Louise Dresser, Lois Moran, Tully Marshall and Lowell Sherman.

Ann Pennington, star of "Gold Diggers of Broadway," her first talkie, will play opposite Ted Lewis in his new picture, "Is Everybody Happy?"

Twenty Years '09- Ago -'29

The Horse Journal Co., which was established in Jamestown about a year ago, has been reorganized and the new company was incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000.

Mr. William Purdom purchased a promising two-year-old filly from Mr. Nelson Sparks.

Mr. and Mrs. George Benham returned to their home in Lorain, after a visit of two weeks in Xenia.

Mr. W. D. Wright celebrated a birthday the fore part of this week—rather his friends celebrated it for him in the way of a postal shower which rained down on him all day.

ANNA HUFF HERE ON SATURDAY MORNING

Mrs. Anna St. John Huff, 74, widow of Clayton Huff, died at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Forest Corwin, 840 N. Galloway St., at 2:30 o'clock Saturday morning following a short illness from complications. Her illness began two weeks ago and took a critical turn Friday.

Mrs. Huff was born in Lebanon February 27, 1855, the daughter of David St. John and Nancy Baldwin St. John. She had been a resident of Greene County for the last twenty-eight years and for the last twelve years had lived in Xenia, making her home with Mrs. Corwin, and also with another daughter, Mrs. S. L. Copsey, also of N. Galloway St., this city.

Her husband passed away nearly eleven years ago. Their marriage took place about fifty-two years ago.

Mrs. Huff was a member of the First M. E. Church and of Obadiah Council, Daughters of America this city.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Corwin and Mrs. Copsey, this city; one son, Edward, of the Upper Bellbrook Pike; and two brothers, Samuel St. John, Kansas City, Mo., and Albert St. John, Miamisburg.

Funeral services will be conducted at the home of Mrs. Corwin at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in charge of the Rev. W. N. Shank, pastor of First M. E. Church, with burial in Spring Valley Cemetery. Friends may call anytime Monday afternoon or evening.

TO REVIVE SCHOOL SAFETY PATROL IN XENIA; BUY SIGNS

A "safety patrol" inaugurated by Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, a year or more ago, as a safety measure, is to be revived under the supervision of school authorities.

Students will be stationed at street intersections to direct traffic as a protection for school children when classes are dismissed each day.

The junior traffic officers will not be issued belts and uniforms as were previously the case but they will be provided with traffic standards bearing the admonition to motorists: "School-Go Slow." The standards, six feet in height with black lettering on an amber background, were purchased for the members of the patrol by the Greene County Auto Club. Ten standards were bought for the five school buildings.

The principal of each building will assign students to street intersections near the buildings, where they will have authority of a regular officer in directing traffic. They will be shifted around from time to time.

To further the idea of "safety first" Louis Hammerle, school superintendent, has agreed to give lectures in the schools on safety.

RAILROADER KNOWN HERE, IS DEAD

Funeral services for Lyman E. Scoville, 48, an employee of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., on the local division who died at the home of Mrs. Guy Neer, mother of his first wife, in London, were conducted Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Neer. Interment was made in Kilkwood Cemetery.

Scoville was employed as cook for the extra signal men, and was well known here. He was a former member of Company C, Ohio National Guard, stationed at London. He had been ill for a short time, and went to London the day he died to consult a physician. His death occurred suddenly. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Stella Scoville and two daughters, Mrs. Marion Wheeler and June Scoville, both of London, three brothers and three sisters.

Widow Gets Insurance and N. J. Home

James Rae Clarke, senior partner of Clarke Brothers Bank, which failed for $5,000,000, refused to name any other beneficiary of his life insurance policy except his wife, which gave to the widow $200,000. She has agreed to split the insurance with the depositors when she gets back the home at Atlantic Highlands, New Jersey, which is estimated at $100,000.

Spending Crowd Drifts Northward From Old Times Square Haunts For Night Club Pleasures

By Central Press
NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Broadway, with loud whoops, is expressing worry of inroads made by Harlem's colored night clubs. Harlem is several miles north of Times Square, but that doesn't seem to prevent an estimated 2,000 joy-seekers a night going there.

Wiseacres say it's because there is no curfew limit in Harlem. And Broadway night life hasn't been the same since Tex Guinan went to Chicago and Helen Morgan retired, to devote her valuable time to the stage and screen.

Tex is in a new revue running in Chicago.

Of the 250,000 colored persons in Harlem, where rents are soaring, few can afford to attend night clubs. The colored entertainers seem to be chiefly for whites.

One is not permitted to enter Harlem's clubs without a partner, and that helps to keep order.

What with the stock market crash and the constantly increasing expansion of Harlem's entertainment area, Broadwayites are not so bright these days, in spite of all their bright lights.

TENT SHOW PROVED POPULAR IN HILLS

ATHENS, O., Nov. 9.—The drawing power of the tent show, be it a circus, medicine show or revival meeting, was evidenced here recently when dry officers raided what was purported to be a tent show dispensing "ice cold lemonade and pop of all kinds."

A tent show at this time of year and located in the hills, brought suspicion into the minds of the officers enforcing the Volstead law and five officers swooped down suddenly upon the "show," confiscating a fifty-gallon still, fourteen gallons of whiskey and eighteen gallons of mash.

Owners of the "show" could not be located immediately.
